Not Much the Matter With Us.

New Age Magazine.

MODERN efficiency and speeding-up are driving this generation mad, cry the alarmists. Our asylums are overcrowded, our jails are full, we can't build hospitals fast enough to care for the mental and physical wrecks of this speedmad civilization.

We pay too heavily for our scientific improvements and high-pressure methods. Civilization is like a runaway engine making fast time but bound for destruction.

Jazz mania, sex abnormalities, mob hysteria, and the flouting of all the conventions are the inevitable consequences, we are told. The only hope for the race is to go back to the simplicity, yes, even the crudeness and discomfort, of the life of our fathers.

But, wait a minute, let us examine the actual conditions a little more closely. Travel at fifty miles an hour never put any man in an asylum, and there is no immortality in flying through the air in running along the surface of the earth. Exposed plumbing is not vicious, electric lights are not demoralizing, and a sermon heard over the radio may be just as uplifting as though heard in a church. The automobile, in itself, is not a contrivance of the devil, and the traveling crane and pneumatic hammer are not tools of diabolism.

It is rather interesting to note that every advance in human power and comfort has been met with this kind of complaint.

A fair day's work never hurt any normal man. The fact that a man by the use of machinery can move a hundred tons of pig iron where in times past he could only move ten, does not produce a deleterious effect upon his mind or morals. The fact that a business manager by use of telephones, telegraphs, pneumatic tubes, dictaphones, typewriters and calculating machines can accomplish more in one day than his father could in a week, does not wear his nerves to a frazzle.

The truth is, that the creeping mental and moral paralysis that is threatening our civilization is due to bootleg whiskey, all-night bridge, midnight jazz, over-indulgence in rich and highly spiced foods, unventilated rooms, sheer avarice and cupidity, uncontrolled passion and lust, inordinate ambition, and an overweening desire to outshine our neighbors, than all the speed and efficiency the world has known.

Here is where our schools have a significant work to do, by teaching our children that the prizes of life are not money and power and place, nor are its satisfactions found in excitement, nervous stimulus and hysteria; that things purchased at the cost of health or honor are too dear; and that true satisfaction consists in health of body, peace of heart, serenity of spirit, a mind well stored with lo-ty sentiments and unselfish thoughts, a soul made strong by faith and love, whereby a man is beloved of children, honored by the aged, is master of himself in any company, is at home in the woods or by the sea, finds companionship in a good book and is happy alone under the stars, counts his wealth not in dollars but in the affection of his employees and associates and the consciousness of a clean life well lived, whose heart beats true, whose nerves vibrate with life, whose sleep is as deep and wholesome as a little child's, and who looks levelly into the eyes of every man. A simple, wholesome, normal, natural existence. So to live, is life.

A State of Mind.

Oregon Business.

THOSE individuals who speak of business depression should remember that so-called "hard times" are nine-tenths state of mind. There is an old French story that illustrates this point.

It seems that there was a portrait painter who had attained a high standing in his art, and was therefore well paid for his efforts. It was his custom to sit each day in a certain cafe and drink a glass or two of good wine. One day, as he took his accustomed seat, he noticed a newspaper on an adjoining table, whose headlines said: "Beware, Hard Times Are Coming!"

This troubled him, and instead of ordering his usual brand of wine, he demanded a cheaper vintage. The proprietor noticed this, and asked him if he was dissatisfied with the wine he usually drank. "No," replied the portrait painter, "but hard times are coming, and I must economize."

That evening, the proprietor of the cafe remembered what his patron had said and told his wife: "That silk dress you were thinking of buying—you must change it to cotton. Hard times are coming!"

The wife told her modiste of her decision. The modiste remembered the portrait she had ordered and, feeling sure that she could not now afford such a luxury, cancelled the order.

In order to forget this discouraging occurrence, the portrait painter repaired again to the cafe. As he was about to order his wine, he noticed the same paper on the adjoining table with its glaring headlines: "Beware! Hard Times Are Coming!" He examined it more closely and for the first time noted the date line. The paper was two years old.

Daddy, He 'Tum

He Lives Again On Christmas.

Boston County Independent.

THE word Christmas originally was the name of a church service commemorating the birth of Christ. Because of the disparity of accurate historical data as to the exact date, early Christians observed the day at several different dates. There was considerable discussion of the accuracy of the date in the early centuries, and some of that discussion occasionally crops out in our own day, but such a discussion is uninteresting and seldom taken seriously.

Today Christmas is not merely a word and a birthday. It is that and more. It celebrates the birth of the Savior, it is true, but the word now typifies the whole life of service and good will of the Master. It is a spirit today. Unbelievers and skeptics accept the spirit of Christmas and reverence the Golden Rule with those of the church. Christmas means a period of merriment and happiness, good cheer, and good will to fellow men.

The story of the manger, recorded 2000 years ago, has swept the world and the light of the Star of the East has penetrated the dark corners of the earth. The story lives as the classic of classics until today the civilized world uses its spirit as a foundation of ethical relationship.

During the year the significance of the babe in the manger may be crowded aside by the business of living, but at Christmas it is told afresh to all Christendom and its annual appeal does not diminish for He still lives.

Bribery of the States.

The Manufacturer.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, in discussing the budget, attacked the system of Congress giving federal aid to states, conditioned upon the state legislatures or the people voting as much more money for the project.

He pointed out that estimates were called for more than $109,000,000 for highways, boats, naval and harbor improvements, naval bases and even fortifications, providing the states raised as much more money.

As a matter of fact, no more pernicious system of doubling up appropriations and burdening the people with high taxes and bond issues has ever been devised.

It is employed extensively in framing so-called uplift legislation, agricultural college and state university extension work, giving so much to each state or county if the state or county will raise as much more.

It is a system that, once inaugurated, leaves the states and their subdivisions helpless against the pressure and demands of paternalistic officialdom that wants to spend the money.

President Coolidge spoke of this system as federal subsidies, while other authorities use stronger terms such as "bribery" and "political hijacking."

Under one of these laws, the federal government sent the Governor of Maine $5,000 to spend on maternity care in one city and he promptly returned the check with a letter that is a classic.

Massachusetts refused similar appropriations from the federal government showing that for every dollar received, it took $18 additional taxes out of the people.

MISS NEVA HAYES TO WED.

The marriage of Miss Neva Hayes of Pendleton, and of Darrell McHargue, also of this city and now a student at Washington State college, will be an event of the near future. Complimenting Miss Hayes, Mrs. Everett Zuiderduin entertained at her home on Monday evening, asking a group of the bride elect's friends for a miscellaneous shower. The affair was in the nature of a surprise and proved most enjoyable.—East Oregonian.
