would come when America's famous opera and concert stars would take their turn at the microphone can now throw out his chest and say "I told you so."

With the radio public applauding the joint experiment of the Victor Taiking Machine Company and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company on New Year's night, when Madame Lucrezia Bori and John McCormack broadcasted for the first time, comes the announcement from the Victor Taiking Machine Company that a galaxy of its artists are scheduled to appear before radio audiences during the coming year.

June 1987

The experiment of broadcasting opera and concert stars is the outgrowth of a movement on the part of officials of the two companies to improve standards of radio music. Whether it will be continued indefinitely depends, it is understood, on the radio public itself. There are numerous obstances in the way of broadcasting by these artists. But as long as the radio public insists on their continued appearance, the Victor Taiking Machine Company, according to E. R. Johnson, its president and founder, will do everything it can to keep them on radio pro-
