-----The Child's Spending Money.

It will be interesting to watch if the principles of thrift, as imparted diately pay to the Receiver the among them his daughter Abbey, now Mrs. Milton, will extend to the third generation. If it does, J. W. DONNELLY, Register. the former Miss Rockefeller wil not find the raising of a family any great financial burden.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., recently gave as his recipe for the inculcation of saving: When my children reached the age of seven I gave them an allowance of 30 cents a week. They were to spend 10 cents out of this, they were to save ten cents, and they were to give ten cents to the church. I audited these accounts every week. These accounts every week. These accounts were never over a dollar or two each week until the age of fifteen.
