Senator or Governor?

OREGON VOTES. GOVERNOR PIERCE will run for re-election as governor and not for U. S. Senator, according to inside information published in an Oregonian dispatch from Salem.

Our own outside information is that no one can be certain as to what Governor Pierce will run for until the time has expired for him to file or revise his candidacy. Governor Pierce can make up his mind both ways with equal positiveness and at the same time.

But when the moment for final decision comes, he probably will make a shrewd one, for he is a fast thinker who can adapt himself readily to any political emergency. A career in the United States Senate has its appeal to him, an appeal somewhat dulled by the realization that he would have to lay low for two or three years before taking the place to which his oratorical talents entitle him.

What he likes most about the office of governor is that for him it is one round of thrill after another. His prodigious vitality enables him to race hither and thither over the state to meet speaking engagements. The hardships of travel have no terrors for him. Getting up at 5 o'clock on a winter's morning to catch a 6 o'clock train after talking the night before till 1 a. m. is the real life for him.

Worries of his office are more than compensated for by the excitement into which he finds himself plunged whenever he does anything that causes controversy, and nearly every one of his official acts gets him into a glorious row. What his chances for re-election will be no one can estimate this far ahead, for public opinion concerning him changes over night.

The same people who curse him one day forgive him the next, cheer him the day after and then curse him when he does something else that irritates. He captures the sympathy of every audience he addresses, no matter what his character, and he is addressing more people per month than all the other speakers in Oregon combined.

If he could hold the loyalty of his auditors he could be elected to any office with the gift of the people, but when they emerge from his magnetic influence they do some thinking for themselves. Outside of a few appointees and hungry office-seekers he has no personal following, but he has the capacity of voicing the prejudices of the great mass of the people so effectively that they shout for him with enthusiasm while the spell is on. No other democrat can defeat him for whichever nomination he finally wants, and no republican will be assured of victory over him at the general election until the returns are in from the cow counties. If he could govern like he can talk what a governor he would be!

MANUFACTURER. WHEN public officials take a firm stand for economy along rational lines in public affairs, they are deserving of commendation. Since the inauguration of the direct primary and the initiative in referendum, there has been a growing tendency for legislators and state executives to "pass the buck" to the people on important measures where political issues are involved.

The Cost of Living.

NATIONAL REPUBLIC. A FEW days ago the Department of Agriculture published figures showing something of the difference in the cost of living today and in the early part of the nineteenth century. Then eggs were three cents a dozen, ham seven cents a pound and whisky twenty-five cents a gallon.

These figures induced a few writers to editorialize on the good old days when everything was cheap and everybody was happy. But as a matter of fact the cost of living was relatively little cheaper than now. Many foodstuffs were low in price, but wages were low too and money was scarce and dear.

And not all things were cheap as compared with now. Transportation, figuring time as money, was more costly then than at present, and there were no five and ten-cent stores and bargain counters in other mercantile establishments where household articles could be bought for a trifling sum. Education cost more than now and books were scarcer and dearer, and there were many hardships which more than made up for three-cent eggs and seven-cent ham.

It is true that we no longer have the good old days. The fact is, we never did.

Miss Myrtle Cradick will attend the Behrke-Walker business college at Portland this summer. She departed for that city this week, being accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Minnie Farlow.
