Oregon Candidates

The contest is on in full force for nomination of candidates for U. S. senator by both political parties in this state, with four contenders in each party. The Republicans are Chas. L. McNary of Salem, present senator; Geo. L. Baker, mayor of Portland; K. K. Kubli of Portland, speaker of the house of representatives in 1923 legislative session and E. E. Smith, a former member of the legislature from Portland as a representative of labor. Mr. Smith has been in the field as a candidate for Congress in the Portland district the past two months, but recently decided to withdraw from that race and come out for senator. It is not expected he will attract much of a following, though the nature of his platform may draw some votes from McNary and the intimation is quite widely voiced that he has been brought into the race by the Baker forces for that very purpose. On the surface of things at present, the indications are that McNary will be the nominee.

The Democratic field is made up of State Senator W. H. Strayer of Baker; Judge Will R. King of Malheur county, who has been in Washington most of the time for several years; former State Senator Milton A. Miller of Linn county, who was collector of internal revenue under President Wilson, and Geo. A. Mansfield of Jackson county, who is a sort of political orphan who has been trying for some years to crown up to the lunch counter. The contest lies between Senator Strayer and Milt Miller, with the odds in some respect favoring Miller, but if Strayer can make a thorough canvass of western Oregon the odds may be reversed. Strayer will carry eastern Oregon by a heavy majority, but the deciding votes are west of the mountains and Miller has an extensive acquaintance there. However, Strayer's record in the legislature for economy is good and the farmers have considerable confidence in him.

The race for Congressional nominations is also becoming heated. In the first district W. C. Hawley has a chance, with only Peter Zimmerman, the radical, against him, and there is a democratic candidate running; it is only to fill a blank space on the ticket. In this district, Geo. T. Cochran of LaGrande, is seeking to unhorse Nick Sinnott of Wasco county, present congressman, for the Republican nomination, but it is thought that Sinnott's powerful work for his district and state and his influential position on committees will secure such recognition by the voters as will insure his re-nomination, even though he is opposed by a secret organization which seeks his defeat on the grounds alone of religious prejudice. The Democrats of this district have for a choice of nomination Harry Graham, the standing candidate from Baker, or R. W. Swagler, an able lawyer of Ontario. In the Portland district there are three Republican candidates—Maurice F. Crumpacker, Frank F. Korell and Arthur I. Moulton—with the chances favoring Crumpacker. The Democrats will nominate the present congressman, Elton Watkins.
