COARSE LUMP TO REFINED DOUBLE X

By HUGHES MEARNS

(© Doubleday, Page & Co.)

IN THE calm, restful library Mr. and Mrs. Williams were obviously agitated. "I will speak to Virginia myself, directly she comes down. Mr. Williams persisted firmly: "These carryings-on have gone too far!" Mrs. Williams tried to calm him. "But I am not sure, James. I could not see very well in the dark; and I was not trying to eavesdrop. Please don't say anything just now, not when she is going out to the fraternity dance."

"Kissing boys good-by!" he fumed. "What is this generation coming to?" Eventually Mrs. Williams succeeded in exacting a promise that he would wait. Customs were different, she argued. "But decency has not changed. I hope!" he broke in. "Of course, if they were engaged," the mother cried. "How could she be engaged to a half-dozen college boys?" he came back indignantly; "there's at least that many dogging about after her, taking her here and there and heaven knows where! And this lad who is inviting her to the dance tonight, what do we know about him? Girls nowadays don't seem—"

A ring at the door stopped his speech. Tom Seybert's voice was heard in the hall. They brightened up at the sound. Tom was a town boy, out of school several years, a steady business sort. "Why couldn't she settle down with some good, solid man like Tom Seybert?" the father asked in lowered tones. Tom had dropped in to talk over the plans of an in-town garage which a group of the suburban men were thinking of managing co-operatively. Oh, no; he was not going to the fraternity dance. "My dancing days are over," he said. They joined in his laugh; he was only twenty-four; but they beamed on him in open admiration. "Tom," Mr. Williams asked abruptly. "What do you think of girls kissing boys good-by?" "Father!" admonished Mrs. Williams.

"That's all right, mother," he waved a hand at her. "I'm not mentioning names." Tom smiled; enough had been said to tell him exactly what the case was. "What do I think of it?" he asked. "It depends on who's doing it." "Now, see here, Tom," said Mr. Williams, "all fooling aside, you know you yourself wouldn't—"

"Oh, wouldn't I!" Tom laughed. A three-cornered debate, warm and full of interruptions, finally disclosed to the astonished elders that Tom, the dependable Tom, had no adverse criticism to make on the custom that was so shocking to the older generation. In the midst of it Virginia danced down the steps. She listened in delight while she daintily powdered her nose. "The nice old pokies!" she laughed, hugging her mother to her. "It's nothing more than shaking hands," she crooned, rocking her mother back and forth. "And it depends a lot on what brand you use. There are all sorts of grades, like sugar; arg't they, Tommy?"

"All the way from 'coarse lump' to 'refined double X,'" he nodded. "But if you were engaged or married—" the mother began helplessly. "Oh," Virginia drawled it out deliciously, "then you'd keep all the sugar for home consumption!" The roll of a car and a ring announced the arrival of Virginia's partner to the dance. In a moment he was in the library, a strikingly handsome youth. "Isn't he beautiful, people?" Virginia stroked his slick hair admiringly. "All us girls are just crazy about him." Unabashed the handsome youth held out his arms to Virginia and sang:

"All the girls have lost their e—
Out-librium over muh, muh, muh, me!
She stepped into his arms and danced delightfully within the space of a square yard, while she took up the verse:
All the girls have gone quite im-
Be-licium over huh, huh, huh, him!
Then she kissed him, a deft little touch and go, right before everybody. "By-by; we're off!" They both danced out singing:

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Astoria.—Damage estimated at $9500 was done by a fire which started in the repair shop of the Kaleva Auto company at Seventeenth and Commercial streets at about P. M. Friday.

Salem.—A new tariff containing reduced rates on logs shipped from points on the Valley Siletz railroad to Newberg and Winona was filed in the offices of the public service commission here Friday.

Salem.—The Eastern Oregon Light & Power company of Baker has filed application with the state engineer here covering the appropriation of water from Powder river for the development of power.

Harrisburg.—The four Baumgartner brothers, Tommy, George, Cal and Millard Wooley, returned from a week-end hunt in the Lake creek country with a bag of seven deer. They are residents of the Busy district.

Portland.—George G. Bingham, circuit judge from Marion and Linn counties, who has been holding court in Portland for several months, died at the Portland Medical hospital Friday after an attack of heart-disease. He was 69 years old.

Salem.—A total of 68,033 non-resident motor vehicles have registered in Oregon since January 1, according to a statement prepared here by Sam A. Kozier, secretary of state. Of these registrations 8401 were recorded during the month of September.

Hood River.—A record for September shipments of fruits was made here this year. Up to October 1, 329 carloads of pears and apples had rolled from market. The shipments for the same period a year ago, which was an early season, reached 165 cars.

St. Helens.—When the registration books closed Saturday night J. W. Hunt, county clerk, estimated that close to 5000 voters had registered. This is an increase of about 500 over the previous registration and indicates the interest in the coming election.

Medford.—Jackson county now has 45,900 acres under irrigation, which added to the 15,900 acres at Grants Pass, makes more than 60,000 acres under irrigation in the Rogue river valley, according to Olen Arnsperger, engineer for the Talent irrigation district.

Salem.—Approximately 30 settlers on lands within the north unit irrigation district appeared before the state irrigation securities commission Saturday and protested against the proposal to certify more than $8,000,000 of the bonds for the development of the project.

Salem.—The average annual consumption of gasoline for each automobile in Oregon during the year 1923 was 439.27 gallons, as against an average consumption of 424.86 in the year 1922, according to a statement issued here by Sam A. Kozier, secretary of state.

Pendleton.—During September the rainfall amounted to 1.10 inches in Pendleton, according to figures of the official weather observer. The maximum temperature recorded during the month was 93, on September 6, and the coolest weather was 33 degrees, on September 27.

Salem.—There were three fatalities in Oregon due to industrial accidents during the week ending October 2, according to a report prepared here by the state industrial accident commission. The victims were C. L. Smith, Bend, boom operator; C. M. Pearson, Astoria, rigger, and Thomas Anderson, Toledo, chaser.

Klamath Falls.—A timber deal which involved nearly $100,000 was closed here Saturday when the Lamm Lumber company of Klamath Falls purchased 3000 acres of pine timber from the Oregon Land corporation. The timber is located on the new Southern Pacific Eugene-Klamath cut-off in the vicinity of Corral Springs.

Condon.—Although a cold north wind has blown almost continually for three days, hundreds of Gilliam and Sherman county residents attended the annual Gilliam county fair which opened here last Thursday. The livestock department was much larger than last year. Every available stall was taken and outside stalls were built.

Eugene.—Marl Liles, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Liles of Goshen, is believed to hold a record for prize-winning at recent fairs, according to E. J. Moore, Lane county school superintendent. At the state fair he won $135 in cash premiums on a bull, cow and heifer he had on exhibition in open competition, and $15 on his club work. Besides these prizes he won first premium at the recent Lane county fair for the best sewing among the school children of the county, winning over a large number of girls.

Blasted Hopes

A Brockton (Mass.) man who has a summer home at Plymouth decided to try the experiment of raising his own blueberries. He bought half-a-dozen plants, at a cost of $3 each, set them out, and awaited results with expectations that were not to be wholly fulfilled, says the Boston Globe. Only two of the six shrubs matured and one turned out to be a gooseberry bush, the other a maple tree.

Algerian Tobacco

Tobacco is becoming an increasingly important money crop in Algeria, says a report to the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache L. L. Jones, Paris. Acreage planted to this crop has increased more than 100 per cent in the last decade and production has jumped from 10,800 metric tons in 1913 to 17,280 metric tons in 1923.
