NEAR EAST RELIEF

Portland, Ore.
Sep. 1 1925

Rev. W. W. Head,
Ione, Oregon.
Deana Bro. Head:

I am glad to tell you that Mrs. W. E. Rambo is coming to Morrow County for a week or more and will pass through Ione on the afternoon train on Friday.

That you may know something about her, I might say she has spent a lifetime in missionary and orphanage work. When a bride, Mrs. Rambo went to India as a missionary of the Christian Church remaining there through the terrible famines of the late 90's. She and Brother Rambo saved the vast orphanages which are still being conducted at Dombab. Her sons were born there. One of her sons has just returned as a medical missionary, to the spot where he was born, to find that they saved from death are now the leaders in all good things in that community. Mrs. Rambo stayed in India against doctor's orders until she was carried out on a stretcher and then she had to come.

Four years ago they asked to be sent to the Near East and while there they walked both literally and spiritually in the steps of the great apostle Paul. At the risk of their own lives, they brought hundreds of children out of Turkey through the port of Mersene from which port Paul often sailed. Again risking their lives they helped rescue thousands of children stranded on the Black Sea. Add to all this the fact that Mrs. Rambo is a most eloquent speaker and one of the finest Christian women you ever knew and you will have some idea of the that will be yours in hearing her. Cordially yours,

LOOK WELL AT THE WELL

Typoid fever is spread by human excreta and it has been Well said that for every death from their disease some one should be hung.

Water from wells or springs or streams which drain territory contaminated by human beings is one of the most fertile sources of the disease; and the milk supply is easily contaminated. Careless people, and the foods under their touch pass along this vicious germ, the typhoid bacillus.

When you eat or drink typhoid germs, your digestive apparatus sends them into your intestinal tract where they commence to play the mischief. In the walls of the intestine are structures which have to do with the biggest processes—little spots which have been termed Peyer's Patches. When the typhoid bacillus gets into the neighborhood of these patches they start an inflammation in them.

The Patches become red and finally pale and gray as the inflammation progresses to dysentery. The tissue becomes dead and finally sloughs or rots off to leave an ulcer where the Patch was. This ulcer may go so deep as to perforate the muscle wall and even the peritoneum and if it goes through that membrane the serious complication of peritonitis may follow. Not only is there a leakage of the intestinal contents out into the free spaces between the organs of the abdomen, but there may be dangerous hemorrhages as well. It is usually a fatal pay for the patient when the Patch becomes a hole.

Before you go to the country, get a typhoid vaccination done by your doctor. Uncle Sam requires it of all his soldiers. While you are away, carefully consider your milk supply and before tasting the water be suspicious. Look around at the tourist camp for a certificate of inspection which shows that the State Board of Health has inspected the premises and analyzed the water and found them safe. Over 300 Oregon camps already bear this sign. If no doubt look for the certificate. Oregon Tuberculosis Association
