McGee Jurors Fail to Agree.

Tillamook, Or.—After deliberating for more than 48 hours on the mass of testimony piled up in the trial of Mrs. Eva N. McGee, charged with the murder of her husband, Dr. W. G. McGee, August 17, by the administration of strychnine poison, the jury was unable to agree and was dismissed. It is understood that ballots were taken almost every hour in the jury room and that early in the deliberations the 11 men and one woman stood eight for conviction and four for acquittal.

John Browning, Noted Inventor, Dies.

College Building Fund is Favored.

Spokane, Wash.—Indications that sufficient funds to complete the unfinished building program at Washington State college will be asked of the next legislature by Governor Hartley was given here by A. R. Gardner, state director of efficiency. With Governor Hartley and Olaf L. Olsen, state director of business control, Mr. Gardner stopped here after having spent a day at Pullman in conference with the state college board of regents up on the budget.

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE RIGHT TO VOTE

YEARS ago at a certain college in the Middle West it was the custom of the undergraduates to march down town some pleasant evening in spring and demand free admission to the local theaters. They accompanied this demand often with a good deal of force and, without right or reason, did considerable damage. There were broken heads often, and broken glass, and on occasion men were sent away from college.

Hoping to solve the difficulty the theater managers agreed at a definite time to open the playhouses free of charge to those who had previously demanded admission. It didn't interest anyone. Having gotten what they wanted, they didn't want it any more.

It is about the same way with voting in this country. As far back as I can remember the women of this country have been clamoring for the right to vote, and to a greater or less degree they have been given that privilege. They made a good many promises as to what things would be done, what wrongs would be righted, what reforms would be instituted in such an event, and some of these predictions have come to pass—but not many.

No one, if one believes what he says when he rises to his feet to make a patriotic speech, thinks more highly of the right of suffrage than does the American citizen, and no civilized citizen in the world is said to use it less frequently than he does. No matter what the question is under consideration or how important its solution to the community most men and women expect to be given a holiday on election day for which they draw their regular pay, and then they often refuse to go to the polls.

There was an important matter to be decided last spring in a nearby town—a matter which should have aroused the interest and the activity of right-thinking and serious-minded people. There were enough women in town to have carried the proposition, even if the men had all stayed at home. There were enough church members to have done it, had they come out to vote, but they did not, and the proposition which involved the control of moral conditions in town was lost because people who had the right to vote did not have interest enough to exercise that right.

It seems to be the right to vote that men and women want more than they desire the responsibilities of voting.
