Truth crushed to earth will rise again,
The eternal years of God are hers; But Error, wounded, writes in pain,
And dies among his worshippers.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, April 8. — James A.
Keller of Lexington was among the 50 freshmen who responded to Coach Amory Gill's first call for rook baseball practice. High school stars from Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and California were among the freshman tossers.
After several cuts 22 men will be selected for a permanent berth on the squad. Coach Gill is well pleased with the material and says prospects are good for mould-

U. P. R. AND SHOSHONES.

Ancient Friendship to Be Sealed With Tribal Rites

Everlasting friendship between the Union Pacific and the Shoshone Indians is to be formally established on the Fort Hall Indian reservation north of Pocatello, Idaho on March 31 in an ancient tribal ceremony of the Shoshones which is to perpetuate forever three generations of amicable relations between the two. Many years ago when the infant Union Pacific was being constructed numerous Indian tribes resented the invasion of the "iron horse" and its attendant "talking wire" into their hunting grounds, and bitterly opposed its construction.
But not the Shoshones.

Under the leadership of Chief Tendoy, who was ruler of the Shoshone nation when Lincoln was president of the United States, this tribe showed sterling friendship toward the enterprise.
They acted as guides for engineering parties, as hunters to supply meat, as scouts to locate and forestall hostile attacks on construction crews, and when such attacks occurred, they turned to and helped the U. P. men fight them off.

This friendliness is a tradition of the Shoshones and one of the happier pages in the history of building the Union Pacific. To commemorate it forever, representatives of President Carl R.
Gray of the Union Pacific and Chief Tendoy III, grandson of the famous old warrior of General Dodge's time, met on the Fort Hall reservation to complete one of the most remarkable ceremonies on record between the red men and the white.

Chief Tendoy Third took the first step in the ceremonial a year ago, when President Gray happened to be in Pocatello on March 31, 1926. Tendoy sent an emisary to him bearing gifts from the Shoshone nation. The gifts were a war bow and four arrows, and the bow was decorated with two eagle feathers.

These eagle feathers were the really significant part of the gift, and in proffering them, Chief Tendoy Third was following one of the oldest traditions of his people, and acting under an Indian custom that antedates the residence of white men in the United States.

By this token of two eagle, he was proffering to President Gray the everlasting friendship of the Shoshones for all time to come. Under the terms of the tribal custom, President Gray was to keep both of the feathers for twelve moons which was Tendoy's way of saying one year. During this time he was to decide whether he, in turn, desired the friendship to be everlasting, and if this was his decision, one of the feathers was to be returned to Tendoy.
He was to keep the other as his "copy" of the agreement.

In recognition of the custom of the Shoshone, President Gray delegated two men to return the feather to Tendoy. Vincent H.
Hunter of Omaha carried the feather to Pocatello, where it was delivered A. C. Hirkley of that city who acted as President Gray's representative in returning the feather to the hand of Tendoy.
Both men will go to the Indian reservation, where they will meet Chief Tendoy and return the feather to him as an indication that the Union Pacific desires everlasting friendship with his people.

Under the customs of the Indians, the chiefs retain all the tribal records, treaties and agreements, and these are handed on from father to son, as chieftanship is hereditary. The feather returned to Tendoy is now a permanent part of the tribal records of the Shoshones. The feather kept by President Gray has been placed in the Union Pacific's museum.

TO A PESSIMIST

BY WRIGHT FIELD IN CHRISTIAN HERALD

When we have such a little time to stay,
Is it worth while to bicker or to fret, To worry over what we cannot get—
To think or say Unkind or bitter things we may regret?

When we have such a little time to stay [And after all the earth is passing fair, And people passing kind!] shall we not share As best we may Life's happier gifts, its blessings rich and rare—Rather than mourn, intoning all day long Our doleful dirge that all days are not bright—And doing all we can to make things right, Lift up our song
In thanks to him who sendeth day and night

SPRING

By Sally B. Castillo

I'm always very happy when the springtime comes around, For it means that plants are waking from their long sleep in the ground.
It means that birds will fly back home, and fill our hearts with cheer,
And everything will start anew in the springtime of the year.
The tiny snowdrop lifts its head, and then the crocus fair Puts forth its cup like blossoms, they spring up everywhere, And then the stately dafodil, dressed in its gown of yellow, Comes forth to tell us it is Spring, he's such a cheerful fellow.

Proud Metropolis Got Title From Royalty

The infant settlement of New Amsterdam was still in its swaddling clothes when across the sea, in the palace of the English king, Baby Stuart posed to Anthony Van Dyke for the prim little portrait that has become so widely known and beloved.
The "Stuart Baby," second son of Charles I of England and Henrietta Maria, had no thought then that the struggling village, one day to be the pride of the Western world—would years later be named in his honor, New York.

This child, who in his turn succeeded to the English throne as James II, was at nine years old, created duke of York and Albany. Upon reaching manhood he precipitated himself into various wars, all of which he came through with a reputation for brilliant personal courage.

In 1664 Charles granted New Netherlands to the duke of York, and an English force under Col. Richard Nicolls took possession of the city, naming it New York in his honor. Subsequently the Dutch recaptured the province, but the English quickly took it away from them again, restoring the name of the Stuart prince.—Men-

AMERICAN RAILWAY ASS'N OFFERS PRIZES

Concerned over the increase that took place in 1926 compared with 1925 in the number of high way grade crossing accidents and believing that more care should be exercised by all those crossing railroad tracks, the American Railway Association has announced plans for a nation wide essay contest among school and college students with three cash prizes of $250 each, to be awarded the authors of essays containing an outstanding, readily available suggestion for preventing such accidents.

Under the rules prescribed by the American Railway Association the subject of the essay is to be "Cross Crossings Cautiously" and each limited to 250 words.
