Princess Now Surgeon

Princess Mary, only daughter of King George and wife of Viscount Lascelles, is now a "surgeon." was admitted recently to the Royal College of Surgeons as an honorary feilow. She was the first woman ever to receive an honorary diploma. The princess, after the ceremony, donned a cap and gown and took a seat among the other fellows.

Dr. George B. Raiziss, professor of chemotherapy of the University of Pennsylvania, is the discoverer of 'metaphen," a compound of mercury. The new formula is the strongest anti-septic known to chemists, and it is believed that its ability to kill bacteria may result in the prolongation of lives by twenty-five years or more.

The DOOM TRAIL

"Because it is to the interest of our people to act even more than it is to the interest of the English," retorted Do-ne-ho-ga-weh with impassioned en-ergy. "Already the English are more numerous than we are. They have strong forts. We have only the forest, They have brothers across the Great Water who will aid them. We have only the uncertain aid of our allies and subject tribes.

"The decision is in your hands. If you fight for the English you will survive and grow stronger. If you fight for the French or if you do not fight for the English, you will slowly be crippled and in a little time you will be no more feared than the Mohicans or the Erles.

That was the last speech of the day, and the council adjourned, only, as in the case of the Senecas' tribal council, to dissolve into minor councils of the roy-an-ehs of the different clan groups. When the representatives of each tribe had reached the unanimity which was required by the laws of the League, they discussed the situation informally with the roy-an-ehs of the other tribes; and on the fifth day Todo-da-he delivered the common judgment of the roy-an-ehs.

"Murray and the Keepers of the Doom Trall are the enemies of the Long House. We must break them now before they grow too powerful. Therefore we have decided to take up hatchet against them. But we shall send word to Ga-en-gwa-ra-go, appealing to him, by virtue of the covenant chain between us, to support us against the vengeance of the French. This is the decision of the Ho-yar-na-go-war, O my people."

"Yo-kay!" answered the roy-an-ehs. And the thousands of people in the mendow echoed the shout.

My attention was diverted to young Onondaga who attempted to explain something to me in his dialect. Seeing I could not understand, Tawan-ne-ars approached and listened to him, a look of astonishment creasing his usually impassive face.

"The Onondaga says that a Frenchman has come to the village who claims to have a message for you," translated the Seneca,

"For me? Who can it be from?" "I do not know, brother. Let us hasten and find out."

We pushed our way through the masses of warriors already beginning the war-dance, and ran between the vegetable gardens toward Ka-na-ta-

CHAPTER XIV

The Evil Wood

We found the messenger squatting placidly by the council-house under the guard of several Onondagas. He was of the usual type of courrier du bols, but with an unusually repellant

"You have a message for me?"

"Are you Monsieur Ormerod?" he replied in his peasant's patois.

"I am." He examined me with a sidewise squint out of his shifty eyes, and fished with one hand in the bosom of his fithy leather shirt. "You will pay for the service?" he inquired warfly. "She said you would

I took one step forward and grasped the ruffian by the arm.

"Who? I repeated. "Tell me, if you value your life! And give me the message.

"No offense, no offense, monsieur," he growled, pulling away from me. "Mademoiselle Murray-"

"Give to me," I insisted. "We will talk of pay afterward."

He rejuctantly withdrew his hand from his shirt, and offered me a folded square of heavy paper, stained with swent. I opened it carefully, lest it tear, and saw these lines of fine, angular writing staring me in the face:

"La Vierge du Bois, ye l'ist Spir., 1725.
"You said You wild come if I caild for You. I Begge you now, in ye Name of All you Holds Deer, help Mes. I am to be Fored to wed ye Chev. de Veuille. Tis ye price he has Fixed for his Services to Mr. Murray. They will Marrie me whenne Pere Hyancinthe is returnd from a Visitt to ye Dionondadies by ye Huronne Lake. So much grace I have obtaned from them. Help Mes.

MARJORY.

"Do notte Trust ye messapler who Carries this, but pless Pay him What he asks. Come by ye ways you Lefte through ye Woodde of ye False Faces."

Stunned, I read it a second time, then handed it to Ta-wan-ne-ars.

"What is your name?" I asked the messenger whils scanned the paper. whilst Ta-wan-ne-ars

"Baptiste Meurier," he said sullenly. "Who gave you the paper?"
"Who but the mademoiselle herself?"

"How did she happen to choose

He protruded his chest. 'Who better could she select than Baptiste Meurier?" he replied. "North of the Lakes everyone knows Baptiste

Meurler-and I am not unknown to the Iroquois." "But how did mademoiselle hear of you, Baptiste?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Who can say? A beautiful young person says she has a mission of much importance and profit to be performed. I reply I will go anywhere for a price. I am told I have only to name it. And so I am here, monsieur." "And what is your price?" I inquired, amused despite myself by the cool insolence of the scoundrel.

"Two hundred livres," he said in stantly.

"Very well. It shall be paid. You will be detained here for a time, and I will purchase for you a sufficient number of beaver pelts to defray that

And, turning to Ta-wan-ne-ars, I asked him to give the necessary instructions to the Onondagas. The messenger, a look of sour satisfaction on his cunning face, was marched off to undergo the restraint of an unwelcome

"Well?" I said to Ta-wan-ne-ars

The Seneca returned me the letter. "See," he said, pointing to the wild reese flying in pairs to the south, "the cold weather is coming. Black Robe will be delayed in returning from his visit to the Dionondadies. And that is a very good thing for us, brother. But for that I think we would be too

"But we shall have fighting," I exclaimed. "The Keepers will soon discover us, and no matter how numerous we may be they will fight desperately. They may carry her away to Canada before we reach La Vierge du Bois."

"This is true," he admitted. "And the thought Ta-wan-ne-ars had, brother, was that we might leave to Do-ne-ho-ga-web and Corlaer the breaking of the Doom Trail whilst you and I with a handful of warriors marched around by the way we escaped, as the white maiden advises in her letter. That way is not guarded, for none has known it, and perhaps we may hide in the Wood of the False Faces and bear off the maiden in the confusion of a surprise attack."

"It sounds reasonable," I said doubtfully. "Tis preferable to trusting to the main attack."

"There is no other plan," he rejoined with energy. "Now we must tell what we have learned to Do-ne-ho-gaweb, and arrange our plans with him."

The Guardian of the Western Door was the center of an immense mob of post which had been planted in the council-place.

The grim face of Do-ne-ho-ga-web was alight with the joy of battle. "Behold, O my son," he called to me "the warriors of the Eight Clans are with us. Our brothers of the Turtle, Bear and Wolf, and our younger brothers of the Snipe, Heron, Deer and Hawk, all hunger for the scalps of the Keepers of the Trail.

"A thousand braves will follow us on the warpath. We will give the French a lesson. They shall see the might of the Long House."

But the light faded from his features as Ta-wan-ne-ars told him of the message from Marjory. A look of cold hatred accentuated the grimness of the hooked nose and high cheekbones.

"The French dog De Veulle is wenried of Ga-ha-no," he rasped. "He has had enough of the red malden. Now he craves the white. Yes, it is well that my red nephew and my white son should go against this man who knows no laws to curb his tust. I charge you, do not spare him."

"We will not spare him," I promised. "Good! It shall be as you ask. Corlaer shall guide me to the Doom Trail. How many warriors are to go with

We debated this point together, and decided that for purposes of swift movement and secrecy we had best rene-ho-ga-web approved this number.

"Do nothing, if you can help it, un-til we have begun our attack," he said. "If you must move without us, rely upon flight, for you cannot hope to succeed by fighting."

Our party mustered at dawn the next morning. It consisted of twenty stalwart young Seneca Wolves, each man selected by Ta-wan-ne-ars for strength and wind. In addition to their clothing and weapons each man also carried two lengthy contrivances of wood, with hide strips laid across

"What are they for?" I asked as Ta-wan ne ars presented me with pair and showed me how to fasten them on my back so that the narrower ends stuck up over my head.

"Ga-web-ga-snow-shoes," he replied. "In the wilderness, brother, the snow lies deep, and we should sink down at every step once the ground was covered after the first storm. You must learn how to use the ga-web-ga, for otherwise you would be helpless.

We kept our purpose a strict secret. even from the warriors of our escort They were told no more than that they were given an opportunity to go upon a hazardous venture which should yield them fame and a proportionate toll of scalps.

That was all they wanted to know Ta-wan-ne-ars was a leader they had fought under before. I was assigned a wholly undeserved measure of fame because of my recent adventures in his company.

We marched rapidly. For three days we averaged thirty miles a day, and each day, when we camped, I practiced with the snow-shoes on some level bit of ground, learning how to walk without catching the points and tripping

We had not gone very far on the fourth day when O-da-wa-an-do, the Otter, a warrior who had attached himself to me, pointed through the leafless trees toward a grayish-white bank which was rolling down upon us from the north,

"O-ge-on-de-o," he said. "It snows." Fifteen minutes later the snow began to fall. Driven by a plercing wind, descended like a vast, enveloping blanket, coldly damp," strangling the breath, blinding the eyes, numbing the muscles.

We struggled along against it until we came to a hillside scattered with large boulders. Here we halted and built shelters for ourselves by roofing the boulders with pine saplings we backed down with our tomahawks Under these, with fires roaring at our feet, we made shift to resist the cold

The snow fell for the better part of two days, so thickly as to preclude traveling, and during that time we dared not stir from shelter, except to collect firewood. In the evening of the second day the storm passed, and the stars shone out in a sky that was a hard, metallic blue,

"We have lost much time, brothers," said Ta-wan-ne-ars, "and we have had a long rest. Let us push on tonight." Our progress was slowed considby my clumsiness on snow erably shoes. But The Otter and other war riors went to considerable pains te picking out the eastest courses to follow, quick with hint or advice to remedy my ignorance. I be came proficient enough to travel at the tail of the column, although my com warriors who danced around the war panions could never murch as rapidly as they would have done without me

.The wilderness which was traversed by the Doom Trail was deserted be cause of the universal Indian fear of the False Faces. Ta-wan-ne-ars and I discussed this point as we neared the forbidden country, and I suggested that he tell his followers our destina-

He waited until we were a long day's march from and well to the northwest of the goal. Then he gathered the warriors about him as they mustered for the trall.

"Soon, O my brothers," he said in the musical, cadenced Seneca dialect which I was beginning to take pleas ure in understanding, "we shall strike our enemies. It is a desperate enter prise you go upon. No war party ever set out to risk such heavy odds. No warriors of the Long House were ever called upon to practice such caution, to reveal such courage.

"O my brothers, we are going into the Wood of Evil, the haunt of the False Faces, which is the breeding place of all the wickedness that brands the Keepers of the Doom Trail, You will face much that is horrible, will be threatened with spells and witchcraft. But I ask you to remember that my brother O-te-ti-an-i and I passed through all such perils without harm. Keep your hearts strong."

things to understand about used car allowances

- I When you trade-in your used car for a new car, you are after all making a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of the new car.
- 2 Your used car has only one fundamental basis of value; i. e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.
- 3 Your used car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.
- 4 The largest allowance is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.
- 5 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.
- O First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your used car.

Dates and Titles of French Kings

Whether one believes that figures ever lie or that they may be manipuated to mean almost anything, it is urious to find a writer in Les Mots Croises busying himself with pointing out the following coincidences:

Louis IX of France was born in 1215. If you take the trouble to add these four digits you will discover that the total, nine, just equals the figure in the king's title.

came into the world in 1402. Addition will match Charles' number in the succession of his name.
