"So This Is June"

So this is June and May is done!
What do we have from this day on?
For May was cold and grey and drear
Not like the Mays of yester-year.
Just yesterday, which was the last
It thundered and rained like a cold March blast,
We hope our June brings sun and smiles
For May's grey length seemed long as miles - - Even the flowers so thick in May Must put off their blooms for another day.
So now in this month were so glad to see
We will look for the sun and flowers and smiles
That cut off the grey and hurry the miles Till the good old days will be gone too soon Then we all will say and "This was June,
Now - has come June what says the weather vane?
We hope for all the best there is for May did give us such a pain, Our calendar hangs on the wall it's always in plain sight
And hubby watches every day to see if the weather's right.
Not only just the calendar he watches with his might
It's sun and moon and stars most any day or night.
Too bad he doesn't know old Mars and all the old bo's tricks
He'd sure be weather prophet then instead of old man Hicks.
Our neighbors smile and say to him "Well, what,
about the weather?"
He's always ready P. D. Q. then we all laugh together.
But just the same they mean it some when they call up at night
And say, "Can we butcher hogs tomorrow or is the moon just right?"
Or sometimes, "Should I sow my wheat or wait another week."
Or when can I wean a colt, a calf, or a pig so they won't squeak?"
But to go back to the weather of this good old summer time
He's watching every day I know and he wants it to be fine.
They're rigging up the combine now for the grain is growing tall
But we will all be walking out if things don't pan out this fall.
So it's owing to the weather whether this or whether that Whether Ford or Dodge or Packard or if just a team of mules Hitched onto the old grey wagon carries us for weather rules -
And there is no use in saying we can altar this or that
For we cannot change the callendar by watching stars and moon
So we will take them as they come and call them lovely days of June.

This poem was sent, assigned, to the Editor this week. We wish to thank the unknown author for this contribution.

"Handling Nettles"

You know the advice about handling nettles:
grasp them firmly. If you tackle them gingerly you'll think you've run into the business end of several needles.

Advertise consistently and vigorously, and you will eventually realize that it pays. Advertising, like any other undertaking,
wont succeed under weak
and vacillating direction.
Take hold firmly
