CITY MARSHAL ARRESTS ROBBER

A man registered at the Lone Hotel under the name of Arlington was arrested by City Marshal Frank after a chase down the creek. Arlington was followed by the men from whom he had stolen a valuable watch and some other items of personal property. They located him at the hotel and when he refused to come out of his room swore out a warrant for his arrest. While this was being done, Arlington climbed out of a window and attempted to escape down the creek. The marshal gave chase and after searching the brush along the creek and finding the fugitive's hand luggage where it had been hidden in the bushes, captured him in the open field and brought him back to lone.

He confessed the theft of the articles and was taken to Heppner and lodged in jail. He to secure the watch from the person to whom he had sold it and return it to the owner.

Ireland's Prized Volume

The Book of Kells is a beautifully executed manuscript copy of the Gospels, dating from the Sixth or Seventh century. It is preserved in Trinity college, Dublin.

France Using Her Climate

France has more varieties of climate than any other country in Europe. There are parts in the south that are almost tropical and the long winters of the Alps is almost Arctic in its severity. In this Arctic land a number of silver foxes are being bred. Another experiment is being tried out that of raising reindeer. The first consignment of a dozen has just left Norway for Rouen, where they will be taken to the center, near Grenoble. If the reindeer take to the Alpine climate, it is hoped to breed sufficient numbers largely to replace horses and cattle for agricultural traction.

Odd Cause of Fires

It is probable that many outbreaks of fire whose cause has never been discovered were due to the sun's rays being refracted from shop windows behind which flimsy materials and small articles made of celluloid were displayed, the secretary of the British fire prevention committee told a writer.
