Whole World Alike When Love Is Young

"Love is much the same, the world over," said Charles Young of the Peeking Gazette. Loai Sing, a pretty Chinese girl, found very much to her liking in the dapper young Englishmen who worked in the banks and the counting houses along the Bund. Hence, one afternoon, she returned late for supper. "Where hast thou been, pearl of my bosom?" asked her mother sternly. "Merely walking in the park," replied Loai Sing, demurely. "And with whom hast thou been walking, petal from a golden lotus leaf?" "With no one," replied the maiden, striving to hide the blush that suffused her velvet cheek. "Then," demanded her mother, "how is it that thou has brought home with thee a cane, instead of thy bamboo parasol?"—Los Angeles Times.

Tree Always Extreme in Matter of Thirst

Trees are confirmed drinkers. No solids for them. They have no temperate habits. They drink continuously or not at all. Thus they live and grow as extremists and are either destroyed or die of old age unreformed, says the New York state college of forestry. In fact, the older they are the harder they drink and the greater their thirst. But no tree was ever found the worse for drinking. When they sleep in winter they go to the other extreme and are teetotalers, but with the first sunshine and thaw of spring they resume their bibulous habits.

The liquid food of the tree is brewed in the ground. Water is the important ingredient. Billions of bacteria work to make soluble many substances so they may be dissolved by water and taken into the circulatory system of the tree. The tiny roots of the tree drink this life fluid, which is lifted hundreds of feet as if by a miracle, defying the laws of gravity without any moving machinery. This fluid is distributed to the branches, thence to the leaves, the stomach of the tree, where another miracle is performed when the liquid is digested and made ready to be formed into wood.

The tree grows year by year, like a person, in height and girth. If the tree falls in the forest billions of bacteria will get hold of it, and with the help of air and sun and moisture its substance will eventually be transformed into the liquid food for other trees.
