Lights for Elephants

The municipal council of Kandy Ceylon, has been urged by the automobile interests to protect travelers against the trains of elephants which carry merchandise along the roads by day and night. The dirty gray of the local elephant is practically invisible at dusk. The council is therefore proposing that every elephant carry a head and tail light.

Central Park

CENTRAL PARK, in the very heart of New York City, is Manhattan's chief and most-spacious breathing space, and the most valuable park area in the United States.

About two and one-half miles long (north by south) and approximately one-half mile wide, it comprises about 840 acres—of which one-half are wooded, and 286 in lakes and reservoirs. It has nine miles of drives, 30 miles of walks and seats for about 10,000 visitors. The present-day value of the land is almost incalculable. It has numerous gates which have admitted as many as 200,000 persons on a single afternoon.

There is a mall or spacious, shaded promenade, lined with statues, where travelers from many climes have shown themselves, but for the most part it presents a rugged, pastoral and refreshingly natural effect—some 40,000 shrubs, 10,000 trees and 50,000 smaller perennials having been recently added. Although the park is looked upon from all sides by great hotels, clubs, apartment buildings and homes of the wealthy, it has sections into which one can disappear and imagine himself amidst a far-away forest wilderness.

Outstanding among its many attractions are two reservoirs, the largest covering 96 acres and holding a billion gallons of water, a natural cave, several charming lakes, a menagerie, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, an obelisk—Cleopatra's Needle—which was erected at Heliopolis, Egypt, about 1500 B. C., and which long stood before the Temple of the Sun, and several hundred cherry trees, presented to the City of New York by the government of Japan.

Wholesale Housekeeping Awheel

KEEPING house on wheels and in a wholesale manner is a peculiar business, yet one company in America makes a special business of it. It owns and operates several thousand of what might be called hotels, but are known as sleeping cars. Each car accommodates about thirty persons and provides sleeping accommodations by night and sitting room by day. These cars are attached to through trains on important railroads in all parts of the country and save the public millions of hours of valuable time by enabling it to sleep while it travels.

The endless and tireless supervision and labor necessary to assure cleanliness—some 4,000 cleaners in some 375 yards are kept busy—the item of laundry alone totals approximately 250, 000,000 pieces annually, and convenience, to say nothing about the proper distribution of these cars to meet the varying demands of the public in all parts of the country, is both a monumental and a costly job.

The immense quantities of supplies required astounds the unacquainted. Some 7,000,000 pieces of linen—including sheets enough placed end to end to span the Atlantic—are ordinarily carried in stock, half on cars and half in storerooms scattered all over the nation. In one year, 3,000,000 paper bags to protect women's hats from dust, 3,500,000 boxes of matches, for smokers, 4,000,000 cakes and over 121, 000 gallons of liquid soap and 51,000, 000 paper drinking cups were among the supplies purchased.

Thirty-six million persons have taken advantage of the service provided in one year, during which time each car operated traveled an average of 154,000 miles.

Octagon House

THAT "the luxury and display of a past generation become the beauty and pride of the present" has come to pass in the case of Octagon house in the city of Washington, where once was held elaborate entertainments that were the talk of the town and today, by virtue of its simple charm and ancient origin, has become one of the prized and much-visited mansions in this nation.

Construction of this relic was started 130 years ago. It was the residence of Colonel Taylor of Virginia, a prince of entertainers who possessed great wealth for his day, who resided here for many years, during which time diplomats, men distinguished in affairs of state, war and peace were welcome within its walls.

But Octagon had been marked by Fate to play another role. Along came the British in 1814 and burned the White House. Octagon became the temporary White House and home of President James and Mrs. Dolley Madison. In it the celebrated Treaty of Ghent binding England and America in peace, was signed by President Madison and Mrs. Madison presided over gorgeous parties that set the tongues of the nation wagging.

Subsequently, Octagon functioned as a home for a girl's school, housed a government department and became a retirement house. Finally it became and incidentally still is the official home of the American Institute of Architects. Realizing what a treasure it was, they set out to restore the venerable place in all its pristine sweetness, and their love for it seems destined to insure its preservation for generations to come.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

All Noisy

Can't Stand Severity of Norrland Climate

Sweden's attempt to colonize the forested regions of Norrland with dissatisfied farmers from other sections is apparently destined to go on the rocks. A large number of the 450 colonists financed by the government in the hope of securing a permanent population for some of the remotest northern districts have announced their intention to move back to central and southern Sweden. The soil is unfit for cultivation they declare, and the severe weather endangers their lives. They also complain of the lack of hospitals and schools and of misrepresentation by government agents. On the other hand, another scheme for colonizing the districts adjacent to the Gulf of Bothnia and the many rivers of the country has proved successful. The government has loaned money to the children of farmers to enable them to purchase their own holdings from their parents, and thus many who might have left for the cities remain to till the soil. More than 1,000 such loans are made to people in Norrland every year, and eventually it is hoped to build up a fairly large population. Norrland is a rugged, timbered country stretching up into the Arctic circle and includes 59 per cent of the area of Sweden.

Auk Is Stupidest Bird.

More than 100,000 little auks, birds so stupid they cannot tell the difference between a man standing still and a pile of stones, were observed on Hakkuyt Island in the Arctic ocean by Dr. R. M. Anderson, Canadian government zoologist, on an expedition into the Far North last summer. Taking advantage of the bird's stupidity, the natives catch them by sweeping them up in the ordinary landing nets used by fishermen. The little auks stand upright, resembling the penguin, and, like their larger relative, form in lines of almost martial array.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.
