A TRIP THROUGH THE OREGON WONDERLAND

June Party Sees Crater Lake, Oregon Caves, Big Trees and Old Ocean

Friday, the 13th, brought no bad luck to the Paul Balsiger party that started very early that morning on a most delightful auto-trip through central Oregon, the coast region and the Willamette valley. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Balsiger, their son, Alfred, and cousin, David Rietmann.

Their first stop was at Moro where they visited Wendell Balsiger out of his early morning sleep to narrow his field glasses. They meant to call on the Wills family at Grass Valley but, when they reached there they found Mr. and Mrs. Wilt still in the "land of nod" and so drove on leaving them to pleasant dreams.

Grammar

The children of an East side family were gathered around the dining room table doing their "night work." The youngest of the grammar group was busy with his grammar lesson about the five senses. Little five-year-old Joan heard him talking and spoke up: "I had five centeses, too, Tommy, but I put them in the collection box."—In dicta, p. 114.

little knowing that they had missed a short visit with former Ione friends. They crossed the high bridge over Crooked River and stopped, as does every one else, to toss pebbles into the water, far, far below. At eleven o'clock the party was at Bend. A visit was paid to the wonderful lava caves, but no one cared to explore far into them. The way led on toward the south, much of it through a desolate timbered country.

During the first day out, the Balsigers had a hearty laugh at the expense of Mr. Rietmann. It seems that Mr. Rietmann has a double and at one of the camps this double was an unwelcome guest.

Meeting Held at Arlington Saturday Arranges the Football Schedule

The County High School Association met at Arlington, Saturday morning, September 14th, and decided on the football schedule for the season and football scheduled several important questions relating to athletics.

One of the items that is usually brought up at any high school contest is that of securing suitable men to referee and a head linesman and it was agreed at meeting to pick from the list approved by the association, a neutral referee and head linesman for each conference game, so that there could be no hard feelings as the result of any of the contests. Continued on Pg. 4.
