The Minstrel show and Country Fair given last Friday evening by the grade pupils of the Ione school was a decided success and both the pupils and the four grade teachers merited and received a great deal of praise. The program given by eighty black faces was one of the best ever given in Ione. The patrons and friends of the school were generous in their support. The receipts of the evening were a little more than $150.00 and the expenses were only $35.00. Frank Enzelman was a guest at the Loins Club luncheon in Heppner Monday.

Can You Pronounce It?
Perhaps the most unpopular ship name, at least among signalmen and underwriters who have to write it down in a hurry, is surely the Venyanasowpakintetehomy. Happily there is only one ship of this name—a barque registered at Jaffa, a port in Ceylon.

MEDAL TO OPERATOR 11,000 MILES AWAY

Malcolm P. Hanson, With Byrd Near South Pole, Hears Tribute.

One of the most striking methods of making an award of merit ever devised was the recent presentation of The Veteran Wireless Operators' Association medal in a speech by David Sarnoff in New York to Malcolm P. Hanson, radio operator with Byrd listening by radio in the Antarctic wastes near the South Pole.

Mr. Sarnoff, Executive Vice-President of the Radio Corporation, praising Hanson, mentioned also the fortitude of the wife of the operator, who had consented that her husband go on the hazardous expedition for the sake of science. After she had received the medal for safe keeping, Mrs. Hanson, deeply touched, spoke to her husband across the vast distance. Within a few minutes Hanson's reply came by radio telegraph through the receiving station of R. C. A. Communications, Inc., at Riverhead, Long Island. In addition to thousands at the Radio World's Fair, where the presentation was made, an uncounted throng heard the tribute over the network of the National Broadcasting Company.

"It is my privilege," Mr. Sarnoff said, "to pay tribute tonight to a man who has made an unusual contribution to science and civilization. Although he is 11,000 miles distant from this glass-enclosed room in Madison Square Garden, where I now stand, he is nevertheless able, through the instrumentality of Radio, to listen to the sound of my voice. That fact alone is worthy of commemoration; even in this day of extraordinary progress in science."

"Malcolm P. Hanson, as Chief Radio Operator of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition, you have been awarded the annual medal of the Veteran Wireless Operators' Association, for the most distinguished contribution, by a radio operator, in 1928, to wireless communication. As a member of that association, with some knowledge of its romantic traditions and standards of service, I feel that the award is well earned and well deserved."

Mr. Sarnoff related how Hanson planted his slender steel towers on the edge of the great ice barrier, cheered his comrades with news from home and gave the world for the first time a thrilling daily account of a polar expedition. Those things alone would have been a contribution to history, he said, but Hanson added to radio knowledge by testing signals against the polar sky, observed the phenomena of the Aurora Australis and made a record of radio behavior under conditions hitherto unknown. To Mrs. Hanson, Mr. Sarnoff said:

"Your sacrifice was all the greater because soon after your husband sailed for the Antarctic, you bore him a child. No medal can ever reward or repay you for your own courage and heroism."

RADIO TELEGRAPH EXPANDS SERVICE

Recent additions to the radio telegraph service from the United States are of special interest now as indications that America is striving to hold her own in a radio telegraph leadership, which is made more difficult to maintain by the British merger of radio telegraph and cables. The announcement that R. C. A. Communications, Inc., will begin work at once to establish an inland telegraph network in fourteen strategic cities in the United States, with plans for 29 inland stations, as wave lengths are granted, also has added to the country-wide attention to this modern means of communication.

Within the last few weeks three new direct international circuits have been announced by W. A. Winterbottom, Vice-President in charge of Communications of R. C. A. Communications, Inc., to Spain, Syria and Costa Rica.

Several reductions of rates for radio telegraph service also have been announced recently by Mr. Winterbottom. It was the competition of radio telegraph which forced a reduction of cable rates by which users have saved $60,000,000 in the last eight years.

Peggy's First Party

By ADELAIDE D. HUFF

PEGGY LONGMIRE sped up the two flights of stairs and down the long hall that led to her room. Once inside she flung off her coat and with eager fingers opened the long suit box that she had been carrying under her arm. Almost reverently she picked up the frock that lay inside, a filmy bit of pink tulle and satin.

"It looks darger than it did in the store even," she told herself. "Oh, if only he likes it and I don't seem too idiotically dumb. My first evening dress. . . . My first party tomorrow."

That night when Peggy went to bed she could not go to sleep. The endless events of the past few months seemed to go trooping past her in a continuous procession; the death of her father, Rev. Walter Longmire, her leaving her small home town and coming to Kinston in search of work and finally, her getting a position in the firm of Myndenning and Davis, Real Estate Brokers. And to crown her joy, Jack Davis, the junior partner, had come over to her that first day with outstretched hand.

"I knew your father when he was dean of Littleton Presbyterian college," he said. "He was certainly a prince. I had two years' history under him. That must be twelve or thirteen years ago."

"I can remember Littleton," said Peggy, her face flushed with happiness, "although we left when I was only eight."

That had been the beginning of their friendship. Really the beginning and the ending until the other day when he had casually asked her to this party tomorrow night.

"The DeRossetts are going to have a fling Wednesday evening," he had said, "and they've been kind enough to invite me. They're giving their guests the privilege of asking any partners they choose. It'll be a nice crowd and I believe you'd enjoy it."

When at last the moment arrived the next day for Peggy's escort to call for her she laughed with sheer delight as she went downstairs to meet him.

As they entered the DeRossett home a few minutes later they were greeted by Mrs. DeRossett whose beautifully dressed hair and magnificent evening gown almost threw Peggy into a panic. Suddenly everyone seemed to be greeting Jack, and out of the crowd of strange faces emerged one that Peggy will never forget.

"Mrs. Myndenning, this is my little friend, Miss Longmire," said Jack easily.

"How do you do?" said Mrs. Myndenning coldly, looking at the girl through her lorgnette. "You must be a newcomer. I thought I knew everyone in town. Where do you live?"

Peggy flushed uncomfortably. She knew that society folk did not live on Fourth street in little back bedrooms, but neither she nor her escort had time to answer for a tall, gawky girl came rushing up and put a proprietary hand on Jack's arm.

"Miss Myndenning," introduced Jack stiffly.

"How do you do? I've been looking for you everywhere," she told him, turning her back on Peggy and completely ignoring her.

"Yes," said Mrs. Myndenning, "we both felt that you rather owed Elizabeth first consideration. . . . You know Jack and Elizabeth are very, very close friends," Mrs. Myndenning finished, turning to Peggy.

"I felt that way, too, until recently," Jack explained comfortably. "We were just like a big family together and I hope it will continue to be that way, but—since Peggy and I are going to—be married soon, I

Radio Reaches Out To Many Other Arts

In addition to transoceanic service, radio, now being developed as a point-to-point communication system, promises this year to add considerably to the transcontinental telegraphic facilities of the United States, according to David Sarnoff, Executive Vice President of the Radio Corporation of America.

"Radio as a service to the home has been reaching out for association with other established arts of entertainment and education," Mr. Sarnoff says. "In the refinement of musical and speech reproduction, in combination with the modern phonograph (to render the two distinct services involved in broadcasting reception upon the one hand, and in recorded, selective programs upon the other), in the field of sound-motion picture development, radio faces another season of progress."

"It includes in its scope both sound and sight, both color and perspective. "It is the first system of communications that has largely removed the limitations of time and space from the distribution of music and speech; it promises eventually to transmit the spectacles of life by sight communication. No channel of transmission offers a greater field of expression to the entertainment art."

rather felt that I owed something to her."

"Engaged!" gasped Mrs. Myndenning, white with rage.

"Come on, mother, do," said Elizabeth irritably. "Why shouldn't he be engaged if he wants to?"

A few minutes later Peggy and Jack had managed to make their escape unnoticed and were speeding away from the scene of gayety.

"That certainly was a strange first party," laughed Peggy as he slowed down and brought the car to a standstill.

"Peggy, will you forgive me for what I said?" he asked. "It was a little premature, but I meant it, all right."

"Then I'll forgive you if you meant it," laughed Peggy.

And for a long blissful moment they both forgot Peggy's lovely frock that should not have been mused and the party and the hateful Mrs. Myndenning.

"It wasn't a very appropriate phrase to propose," said Davis after a while, "but I had to do something with that fool woman. She's been trying to—"

"To marry you off to Elizabeth," finished Peggy.

"The worst is she's my partner's wife," said Davis solemnly. "I hope she doesn't stir up trouble. But, my, just won't she make somebody a cat of a mother-in-law!"

"I guess there are lots of mothers who prevent their children from getting married just by their own hatefulness."

"Lots of 'em," agreed Jack joyfully, "but yours isn't one of them."

Local Happenings

The Ione district was visited by a beneficial rain Sunday. Rain began to fall about daybreak and continued to fall throughout the day. The precipitation for the day amounted to a little over a half inch. Light showers continued through Monday and Tuesday.

L. P. Davidson suffered a severe financial loss last Friday when the house and store house on the home place twenty five miles south of Ione burned to the ground. The fire of unknown origin, started in the store house, and when first discovered had spread to the dwelling house and then beyond control. The house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Demaris. Mrs. Demaris was sewing in the front part of her home when she made a startling discovery that the house was burning. She telephoned Martin Lovegreen who came at once. Had it not been for him the barns on the place would have no doubt burned also as a high wind was blowing. Several pairs of blankets and a little wearing apparel was all that was saved.
