BRIGHT SALESMAN

"I am an advertisement canvasser. Have you any small wants I can advertise?"
"Certainly not. My servant should not have admitted you. I have told him repeatedly that I do not see canvassers."
"Then dismiss him and advertise in our paper for a better one."—Faun, Vienna.

Underworld Battle

"I shall call the police!" exclaimed the burglar.
"That's what I meant to do," said the woman whose jewels were in jeopardy. "What hope have you, if the police arrive?"
"I shall accuse you of attacking me and trying to take possession of my hard-won loot from previous jobs of the evening."

From the Mouth of a Child
"Grandma close your eyes once. Why, my child?"
"Because papa says, 'When grandma closes her eyes we'll get a big bag of money.'"

A Training Stunt
The Guide—That statue represents the disk thrower. Disk throwing was quite an important event in the Olympian games.
Mrs. Hiram Offon—I wonder if that's what my kitchen maid is practicing when she should be washing the dishes?

Evidence
"You'd never think this street would be a cow path, would you?"
"Oh, I don't know; look at all the aives on it."

Odd Harvest Festival

Held in London Church
Out of the most curious harvest festivals in existence is that held every year in the old city church of St. Dunstan in the East, near Bishopsgate, London, England. At this thanksgiving service 39 kinds of fish, equal to the number of the 39 articles of the Church of England, are displayed.
A brotherhood of fish, extending from the lordly salmon to the humble periwinkle, and including sole, eel, halibut, herring, cod, lobster, crab and oyster, are used to decorate the church, and fruits, tea, coffee, cocoa and wine also have an honored place.
This year a gigantic wheaten loaf more than four feet high, and a great emden goose were also of the company. All these are offerings from city merchants, and when the service is over they are sent to Guy's hospital, according to ancient custom.—Detroit News.

Youngster's Retort Not Grammatical, but Neat

The shortage of fruit pickers in Orange county recalls the story they tell of a Santa Ana man with a small grove who was too parsimonious to hire expert help and tried to do the work himself with the aid of his small son.
It was during a midseason irrigation that the old man noticed his son idling in the shade and called out to him:
"Say! When do you expect to do enough work around here to make these oranges grow?" To which the tired lad replied:
"As soon as you give me enough to eat to grow big enough to do enough work around these oranges to make 'em grow."—Los Angeles Times.

Moose Had Best of It

The tale of two hunters who went after ducks only to have their car nearly wrecked by a big moose was told at Rice Lake, Wis., recently. The hunters were Dr. A. S. White and Ray Fitch, who displayed their damaged automobile as proof of their story. The men were driving along an untraveled highway, they said, when a giant moose jumped from the side of the road and ran head on into their car. The windshield of the car was broken, one headlight was torn off, a hole was gouged into the top and the radiator was punctured in the peculiar accident. The moose rolled from the hood of the car and disappeared in roadside undergrowth and apparently not seriously hurt.—Indianapolis News.

He Was Interested

A reporter and a photographer went to a Pittsburgh automobile agency to get a story and pictures. While they were there a man rushed in asking for a fire extinguisher, saying that a car outside was on fire. "C'mon," said the reporter to his camera man. "May-be it's worth a picture." They went outside, where the whole landscape was lighted up by flames rapidly consuming a car. In true news-bound style the photographer began to do his stuff. He suddenly turned pale. "Hey—wait a minute!" he yelled, dancing toward the burning chariot. "That's my car." And so it was.

Virtue to Vice

Julius Rosenwald, the millionaire philanthropist, in an address in Chicago advocated short hours and long vacations.
"I love work," he said. "All successful people love it. It is one of the best things in the world. Yet work must not be carried to excess."
"Work, carried to excess, from being a virtue becomes a vice. Just as four aces in a card game fill every heart with admiration, while five cause all manner of trouble, hatred and turmoil!"

Black Pessimism

"Our Japanese bravery is perhaps due to Japanese pessimism," said Ojio Oyama, Japanese consul to San Francisco.
"We Japanese have a black strain of pessimism in our veins. Our proverbs are the most pessimistic in the world. For instance:
"To revenge yourself on your enemy, let him live."

Very Serious

"What makes you look so miserable?"
"I would like to change a $20 bill."
"But that is nothing serious."
"But I haven't got one."
