Amazed by Flies' Absence

A six-year-old girl from a poor neighborhood recently enjoyed a day's outing at the Country club home of a woman interested in social work. Tired of playing in the yard, the child went into the house and presently fell into a perplexed silence.

"Where are your flies?" she asked at length.

"We haven't any," said the woman.

"We've got millions," said the little girl. "It doesn't seem like home."

Debt That World Owes to English Naturalist

The first man to dream of treating the sea as a gigantic food farm was the famous English naturalist Frank Buckland, who was born in 1826 and died in 1880. During the last 20 years of his life he never tired of impressing upon his countrymen the importance of the fisheries and the need for wider knowledge of the habits of fish. He was the first to look ahead and conceive the idea of fish culture.

Though it is usually caught in rivers, the salmon is really a sea fish. It ascends the rivers to spawn, and the young salmon spends two years of its life in fresh water before going down to the sea.

Buckland found that nature's methods in the breeding of salmon were extraordinarily wasteful, not more than perhaps one egg in 10,000 ever producing a fish that grew to maturity. By introducing a scientific system he was able to bring about a wonderful increase in many of our great fisheries, and it is largely due to his early work that the salmon has been introduced successfully into such distant countries as New Zealand.—London Tit-Bits.

Trapped Lion Climbed Tree, to Drop to Death

A correspondent of the London Weekly Times, at Chisamba, in northern Rhodesia, reports another occasion of a lion climbing a tree. A wire trap, set in growing maize to catch wild pigs, caught a young lion which, in panic at finding its head in the trap, uprooted the poles and rushed away, the noose tightening as he ran. Claw marks on the branches show that the lion climbed 15 feet into the tree and then either fell or jumped. The sty pole was firmly wedged in the fork of the branches and the lion was suspended in mid-air and was found dead the next morning. At a farmhouse in the same district a lion entered a bedroom and killed a dog under the bed in which the farm manager was sleeping.

Tired of 'Em

One hot afternoon Jackie's uncle took him to the soda fountain in the neighborhood confectionery.

"What will you have—a frappe?" his uncle asked.

"No," replied Jackie with decision. "We have those all the time for breakfast."

Slightly Displeased

"Did you cancel all my engagements, as I told you, Smithers?"

"Yes, sir, but Lady Millicent didn't take it very well. She said you were to marry her next Monday."

Glass Pictures Produced

Stained glass of different colors may be fused into one picture by a process just invented by Basil R. Bayne, an artist of Gerrard's Cross, England. The invention is regarded in England as the greatest development in the technique of stained glass since the earliest days of the art. It is claimed that the use of leadwork and enamels is eliminated, and that the new glass can be produced more cheaply than other forms of pictures in glass.
