Caribou Compelled to Carry His Dead Enemy

In Alaska, where wolves have terrorized the timid reindeer and slaughtered them in great numbers, one bold wolf came to an inglorious end last summer when it tackled a bull caribou.

A report to the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture says: "Victorious in combat with the wolf but unable to free himself from the dead body of his foe, a big bull caribou was seen a few days ago on Birch creek in the Circle country walking slowly along, bowed down under the wolf's weight. The wolf apparently had been impaled upon the caribou's horns and mortally wounded, but the caribou was unable to free himself from his burden. One of those who saw the caribou said the weight he carried was too great to permit him to run. Every time he passed a tree he would try to rub the wolf from his horns. He was accompanied by another bull, which would run ahead a few paces and then wait for his slower companion."

Cold in Head, Chest or Throat?

RUB Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole-rub once an hour for five hours...

Those good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor—are mixed with other valuable ingredients in Musterole to make it what doctors call a "counter-irritant" because it gets action and is not just a salve. It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Keep Musterole handy—jars, tubes. All druggists. To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

HINTS FOR HOMEMAKERS

Caramel is a favorite flavoring with a large majority of people. It is equally as good as a flavoring for meat sauces, soups and made dishes, as in desserts and ice creams. It may be quickly and easily prepared as follows: Melt a cupful of granulated sugar slowly in a smooth omelet pan and cook until it becomes a rich brown, being careful to avoid scorching. Pour in a cupful of boiling water and stir until a thick sirup is formed. The caramel may be kept indefinitely if kept covered or bottled.

Ink stains on the fingers can be removed by rubbing with a cloth moistened with household ammonia. Rinse the hands in clear water afterwards. Lemon juice and sunshine is an excellent remover of rust spots on linen or white fabrics. When it is necessary to use boiled water for drinking it will taste better if it is poured back and forth from two pitchers, giving it more air. Use a lump or two of sugar instead of starch when washing fine laces.

An easily prepared mushroom sauce which adds tremendously to the attractiveness of a broiled steak is prepared thus: Mix in a frying pan one tablespoonful each of butter and flour, stir in gradually one cupful of brown stock; when boiling point is reached add one cupful of mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste, a tablespoonful of mushroom catsup, with a teaspoonful of caramel.

When white stains on polished wood surfaces cannot be removed by a cloth dampened in alcohol, use powdered pumice mixed with linsed oil to make a thin paste. Rub over the spots until they disappear. Wipe off carefully with a soft cloth dampened with furniture polish.

A quick relish may be made for an occasion by chopping cooked beets with celery and cabbage and a tablespoonful or two of freshly grated horseradish root, sugar, salt and a little vinegar or lemon juice to taste.

Reasons for Scarcity of Batak Literature

Marco Polo and the emperor of China landed on the Batak coast, to avoid a storm in the Thirteenth century, and had to erect block houses to avoid being eaten by the natives. For the Bataks were and are cannibals, eating renowned individuals, not for dietetic reasons, but that his strength and wisdom may be incorporated in the banquets. The choice cuts are the fingers, toes and the palms of the hands; and—according to a cannibal chief who confided in an explorer—the popular term among cannibals for human flesh is "long pig," as the general taste is like that of the pig.

This tendency on the part of the Bataks is probably the reason why libraries are not usually furnished with Batak literature, because very few agents could be induced to look for rare works within reach of people with such ideas. Indeed, the Cleveland public library is probably the only library in the world to possess a pustaka.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Inn's Many Famous Guests

The Lion Inn at Shrewsbury, England, still popular with tourists, has entertained famous persons for more than a century. There George IV danced before the battle of Trafalgar and there Paganini once played. De Quincey spent a night at the Lion and Disraeli was there in his early days. In 1838 Charles Dickens, accompanied by "Phiz," was accommodated at the inn and wrote to his daughter of "the strangest little rooms" and "how the windows bulged out over the street as if they were the stern windows of a ship." The ballroom, designed and decorated by the Adam brothers, is still used for dancing.

Back to the Library

A young patron at the West Indianapolis public library was explaining why he had not been taking out books for some time.

"Well, you see," he said, "my brother used to buy lots of magazines and I'd read them. But he went 'goofy' and got married and don't buy 'em any more."

DESIGNERS ENTHUSE OVER TWIN PRINTS IN DIFFERENT TONES

Informal Dress of Twin Prints.

INCOMING prints which are registering for immediate wear and for the future are very interesting. They tell their own story, as to whether they are intended for informal daytime frocks and ensembles or for formal afternoon and evening wear. You know the moment you see the new dark-toned next-patterned types that they expect to be worn throughout the informal daytime hours about town or in the realm of sports just as you are perfectly sure that the gorgeous big florals are destined for a career in the midst of dressy afternoon affairs and evening formals.

Designers are enthusiastic over the new "twin prints" which are produced in two different tones of one color so they can be used together. In the picture the body of the frock is made from the darker color of a twin diamond print while the trimming is to the brighter shade of the same print. These smart-looking twin prints are especially adaptable to the very popular contrast-yoke fashions. The lighter portion makes the deep yoke and in most instances the sleeves, while the darker silk which carries the identical patterning is employed for the rest of the bodice and the skirt. The accompanying jacket, for there is almost sure to be a complementary jacket, will more than likely be styled of the same dark silk as the skirt portion, so that when worn on the street the ensemble presents a quiet tailored appearance.

Plaids are the smart thing in prints for spring, both in crepe silks and chiffons. At this moment it is the costume blouse of plaid silk which is initiating the vogue for plaids. It brings most any cloth suit right up to the minute in fashion, if beneath its fur-trimmed jacket there is revealed a blouse of vivacious plaid. It is easy to distinguish the silk absence. Most of the gowns of distinction are classics in simplicity.

In order to impart individuality to formal dress, fashionists have turned to novel and striking decollete as a solution to the problem. The newest gesture in the way of low-cut necklines is the "harness" decollete. See it carried out effectively for the gown pictured. This dress which emphasizes the opulence of fabrics which go to make up modes of ultra formality, is styled very simply of exquisitely sheer metal cloth. Its intricately strapped decollete is that decorative, to add further trimming would detract from the symmetry of "lines" which distinguish this gown.

Not only is sheer and shimmering lame weaves adding their glamorous beauty to the evening picture but the glint of their gold and silver splendor is reflected in many a gorgeous blouse as it tops a skirt of handsome velvet or peaks from beneath a richly furled velvet jacket or coat on a wintry afternoon.

Since the decollete has become so important a factor in evening fashions more variety is being exploited than has been the rule for several seasons. The deep V-shape which extends almost to the waistline at the back competes with the youthful and naive of-the-prints which have just arrived on the scene, because of their colorings, which have a distinction all their own, the tendency being to run to rather neutral tones, such as for instance, a delicately outlined plaid effect done in black and gray on white.

When the new plaids, stripes or checks are not in use then fancy turns to medium-sized spaced types—on preferably black, navy or brown backgrounds. Emphasis is being placed on blue in every key with navy and white combinations made a leader.

For Formal Occasions.

In creating evening modes, designers are doing everything to center attention on the elegance of the fabrics of which they are made. With this object in view superfluous frills and furbelows are conspicuous by their shoulder treatments which add a quaint ruffle or bertha of lace or beaded work.

Frocks of satin, taffeta or crepe are often tied from shoulder to shoulder at the back with scarflike arrangements, the streamers of which soften the decollete lines.

Velvet gowns noted at the theater, opera, balls and night clubs often introduce a border of white ermine. Glittering straps are also favorite themes.

Very flattering are the diversely-cut necklines, some round and dropping off the shoulder, others pointed or square, which are outlined with borders formed of tiny flowers either the color of the gown or in charming contrast.

A GOOD WINTER

I must tell you something that happened in Chipmunk circles a little while ago.

Mother Chipmunk was down in her hole in the ground. The squirrels always have their homes in the holes of trees, but the chipmunks like the ground better.

She was teaching all the very little ones that they must only drink dew-drops.

They are like the rabbit family and think that water that has touched the ground is very dangerous to drink. They will drink only fresh dew-drops and rain water from leaves and flowers.

All the little chipmunks hurried and scurried about, and pretty soon Father Chipmunk said:

"I will offer a prize."

They were all much excited at this news.

"Yes," continued Father Chipmunk. "I will offer a prize for the one who gets the greatest number of nuts."

"Hurry, scurry!" He, too, started off on the hunt.

"Well," said Mother Chipmunk, as she looked up from her hole where the nest was hidden, "I think that's a funny joke, Father Chipmunk."

"If you get the greatest number of nuts yourself, what will you do then?"

Father Chipmunk came back from just having started off to hear what Mother Chipmunk had to say.

"Well," said Father Chipmunk, blinking his eyes and grinning, "I have a fine prize, a very fine prize. I wouldn't mind having it myself."

Mother Chipmunk kept on talking and chattering with Father Chipmunk.

After some time had gone by a good many of the little chipmunks began running back and forth with great piles of nuts.

They each picked out a corner, so that in the end all the nuts could be counted and prize winner decided upon.

And it was not until then that Father Chipmunk saw that he had been spending all his time chattering, and that he hadn't found a single nut.

"I won't win the prize," he said in Talking and Chattering.

a shrill voice. "What made you keep me here talking, Mother Chipmunk? Don't you want to have me win the prize?"

"Certainly not," said Mother Chipmunk.

"So that is why you have kept me here?" He laughed at the joke Mother Chipmunk had played on him.

"It would have been a very bad example for the children to have had you do such a thing, and I didn't approve of it," she said.

He saw there was reason to what she said.

Well, Chippy Chappy Chipmunk won the prize, and all the nuts that were gathered were put into the big nut store-houses of the chipmunks.

"We'll have a good winter," said Mother Chipmunk. "We can always wake up and find food."

"We'll have nothing to worry about. Ah, we can go to sleep now."

This happened some time ago, but now from time to time the chipmunks are eating from their stored meals.

And what was Chippy Chappy's prize?

An extra supply of nuts Father Chipmunk had gathered before the party.

She Knew the Type

Little Mary Jane and her next-door neighbor Billy were engaged in an absorbing conversation.

"What are anarchists?" asked little Mary Jane.

Then Billy swelled with wisdom. "They want everything anyone else has got, and they never wash themselves," he replied.

"Oh, yes!" cried little Mary Jane, with enthusiasm. "I see—they is just little boys grown up!"

"Arthur had a bad case of measles," says Mrs. Clara Gilliam, 4137 Bowdoin St., Des Moines, Iowa. "He was having a hard time until I gave him California Fig Syrup. It regulated his bowels, seemed to give him new strength and energy."

"I have since used it for all his colds or upsets, and it has helped make him the healthiest boy I know."

For over fifty years, mothers have praised California Fig Syrup. Doctors advise its use when children are bilious, headachy, constipated; and to keep bowels open during colds or upsets. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor. It is mild in action.

Faithfulness

Thirty-five years ago Samantha Burns entered the Dallas county (Iowa) home and was assigned a job peeling potatoes. She peeled a bushel and a half every day until her death, never missing a day. For the 12,784 days that would make 19,175 1/2 bushels, or enough to fill 32 freight cars. Incapacitated and with death drawing nigh, the aged woman worried about her task, asking: "Are the potatoes being peeled as well as I did them?"
