Danger in Distinction

English Bishop Makes

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., said at a dinner in Blackstone: "An English bishop has come out with the assertion that he is ready to preach the eternal verities, but not to preach that the animals went into the ark two by two."

"Now, it is dangerous to talk that way. It makes people think that some of us preachers preach what we don't believe in—preach lies, in short."

"It was under some such feeling, no doubt, that a cross-examining lawyer once shouted at a preacher witness:

"Now, sir, remember, please, we want the truth and nothing but the truth here. You're not in the pulpit now, you know."—Detroit Free Press.

Rooster "Firebug"

A Brunswick (Maine) farmer has a firebug on his farm in the form of a rooster. He reports that while on the way to the barn he smoked a cigarette and placed the lighted end on a well curb before entering the barn. A moment later the rooster entered the barn with the cigarette, still burning. In his beak, the farmer shouts and as the rooster turned and ran it dropped the cigarette into chaff, which burst into flames. The blaze was stamped out before it had spread far.

WORLD WAR YARNS

by Lieut. Frank E. Hagan

The Original "Doughnut Girl"

Today she is known as Mrs. Robert E. Walbridge, wife of a Peterboro, N. H. business man who served as a lieutenant in the One Hundred and Third Machine Gun battalion, and in 1928, when she and her husband went to the American Legion convention in Paris, she was known as the president of the American Legion Auxiliary. But back in 1918 thousands of American soldiers who enjoyed the doughnuts, pies and coffee which she handed out to them knew her as Miss Irene McIntyre, one of the "Sallies." For she was the original "doughnut girl" of the A. E. F.

As one of the two daughters of Colonel McIntyre, once a Salvation Army commander in New England, she and her sister, Gladys, were among the first contingent of "Sallies" to join the American army in France. In March, 1918, the girls set up their field kitchen back of Ansoville in an old mill that the doughboys helped them repair and there day after day they made and served coffee by the gallon, pies by the hundred and doughnuts by the thousand. In June their canteen was at Roulecourt and at the end of that month they were moved to the Chateau Thierry sector and later toward the Swiss frontier.

They saw service with the Thirty-seventh, Forty-second and Seventy-seventh divisions. They were in the Argonne and at Thicourt when that village was destroyed by shell fire. A shell wrecked their canteen hut and for days they lived in a cellar.

As a result of their service on every front that saw an American division, they were cited in army orders and recommended for the D. S. C. by General Pershing himself. Returning to America in 1919 they marched in the place of honor just behind Gen. Clarence R. Edwards in the parade of the Yankee division and in a ceremony on Boston common the general cited them for bravery in continuing their work under fire at the front.

Irony of War

Four stalwart sons of an elderly French couple who lived in a province of France adjacent to both Belgium and Luxemburg, were called to the colors by French authorities at the outbreak of the World war. For four years not a word was heard of any son by the parents. Their property had been occupied by the Germans after the first big push. Then came the Armistice.

Two of the sons, survivors of four years of fighting, were granted immediate leave by the French because their parents were in territory that had been occupied. They started at once for home. At the same time the other two sons, who had been made prisoner in their first battle, were liberated from a German prison camp and began the journey to northern France.

The four boys arrived home the same day for a joyful reunion with their aged parents. Two of the boys had been through four years of almost continual battle; the other pair had survived the lack of nourishment inevitable to prison life. Yet, despite the vicissitudes they had borne, each of the four was square of shoulder, clear of eye. Each appeared fit to resume his life where he had laid it down in 1914.

And it is one of the horrible ironies of war that on the same day her four boys returned, scorched but whole from their adventures, the old mother was taken away. For suddenly, with the reunion at its height, she had gone raving mad.

Compensation

His experiences under shell fire transformed Fred R. Weiss of Chicago from a $2.50 per week waiter to an influential inventor and manufacturer. Weiss left a hash-slinging job and little else to enlist in the Twenty-first Field artillery. His brother, back in Germany, served as an officer in the German army. But that didn't prevent Weiss from winning a D. S. C. for devotion to duty and bravery under fire.

Boxes of burning powder were shooting skyward from the dump when Weiss' captain, W. C. Dunkel, attracted his attention to a pile of TNT high explosive toward which the flames were spreading. His arm had been injured. But Weiss dragged the remaining powder boxes, one by one, from the vicinity of the TNT. Then he fainted.

When the war ended, Weiss was given vocational training. He chose a four-year electrical engineering course at Lewis institute, Chicago.

Shortly after graduation, the former $2.50 per week waiter invented a device for detecting defective wiring. A company of which he, himself, is the head, markets this product—and Weiss has definitely emerged from the $2.50 class of wage earners.

To Cement Broken China

A housewife says: "Dissolve a little gum arabic in a little water so that it is rather thick, put enough plaster of paris into this to make a thick paste. Cement broken pieces of china together and in half an hour they cannot be broken in the same place. Hot water seems to make it more firm."

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Babies, bottle-fed or breast-fed, with any tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels.

That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid the fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this, you have the word of a famous doctor. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular; keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr. Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby.
