

DAINTY EYELET EMBROIDERY REGISTERS TREMENDOUS VOGUE

IT IS very evident, from the tremendous vogue which eyelet-embroidered materials as well as eyeleted effects of every description are enjoying, that fashion's followers know a good thing when they see it. The enthusiasm which prevails in regard to sheer eyelet-worked cottons at the present moment, knows no bounds. Designers are doing some very clever things with the lovely new eyeleted weaves which are attracting so much attention these days. For instance, of fashion, which even a fairy god-mother might well be proud to see it occupy this summer.

Now that cotton is appearing in such lovely and pretentious roles, style-minded women everywhere are paying homage to it. Designers are especially keen for smart cottons such as dune oxford and faconne weaves when it comes to making up tennis frocks and other sports costumes. Materials of this sort are making a wide appeal this season, in that through a there are novel little separate jackets made of eyelet-embroidered batiste being shown, the same to be worn with a pique skirt and a sheer lingerie blouse.

They are wearing these swanky jackets made of eyeleted batiste over dark crepe frocks, too, or with navy, brown or black skirts, the blouse completing the picture, being either lace-trimmed net or fine handkerchief linen.

The idea of eyelet embroidery for the separate blouse is being worked for all it is worth. The costume in the foreground in the picture stresses the effectiveness of the eyelet blouse when it is worn with a smart afternoon suit. An ensemble such as this speaks the daytime mode at its best.

Enthusiasm for eyelet-batiste carries so far that infrequently it is employed for both the dress and the hat which tops it after the manner of the arresting ensemble pictured to the left.

And if you are planning for midsummer you may as well add a charming sunshade of the same eyelet embroidery.

As to the dressmakers' problem as to what to suggest in answer to the certain scientific darning or mercerizing process they have been made to take on a fine luster and sheen which adds infinitely to not only their attractiveness but to their durability and laundering qualities as well.

The three-piece jacket suit as pictured in the foreground is such as will be chieftly worn this summer when mid-lady goes from country club to country house. This stunning model is made of pale blue dune oxford, the blouse being of handkerchief linen in the same charming blue. As said before, one of the advantages of this handsome mercerized oxford weave of which it is fashioned is that it will launder to perfection.

For the clever tennis frock to the left in the picture the designer chooses a dune oxford cotton, its all-over patterning standing out in lustrous design like satiny damask. By the way, have you ever stopped to think that the "tennis frock" is as often misnamed as any type of modern dress can be? To be sure tennis frocks are worn for tennis, but there are "tennis frocks" which play bridge on the country club porch; which smile forth unenger queries coming from to-be bridesmaids, debutantes, and members of the forthcoming graduating class as to what to buy for the all-important frocks, sheer eyelet gives an immediate and happy solution.

Competing with the eyelet embroidered batistes in white or natural tone are any number of eyeleted sheer cottons which make color their feature. The color is expressed either in monotone effects for both the perforated patterning and its background or the openwork embroidery may be executed in a single bright color on a contrasting background, or the design may be carried out in multicolors worked on a white background.

Cotton Weaves Popular.

Cotton no longer a Cinderella among textile weaves, has emerged from its humble niche. It has risen to a height der a fetching brimmed hat at luncheon time; which take tea in friendly gardens; which being topped off with scampish berets, travel everywhere in motor cars. And, of course, tennis frocks play golf—and backgammon! For the making of such, handsome cottons of the type employed for the dresses illustrated will be found ideal.

It is not only in the field of sports that cotton weaves are setting a new high record. The scene of their greatest triumphs is as often in the ballroom or on the platform where the proud graduate is receiving her diploma, or in the wedding procession. Of course, the cottons worn at such occasions are as sheer and dainty as looms can produce them—dotted swisses, organdies and the like.

"Suppose that this here vessel," says the skipper with a groan, "Should lose her bearings, run away and bump upon a stone. 'Suppose she'd shiver and go down when we save ourselves we couldn't!'"

The mate replies, "Oh, blow me eyes! 'Suppose ag'in, she shouldn't.'" —Wallace Irwin.

COME TO DINNER

There is no dinner dish that is more popular, if we except chicken, than

Baked Ham.—Soak a ham over night in the morning put it into a kettle with one onion, one carrot, six peppercorns, one bay leaf, six cloves and water to cover. Simmer for three or four hours until tender. Remove the skin and stick with whole cloves; bake in a roasting pan, basting with the ham liquid and cider, using half of each. When the ham is well done stir some brown sugar into the cider sauce and spread all over the ham and brown. Serve hot with the liquor from the pan for sauce.

Deviled Lobster.—Cook three tablespoonfuls of onion, one tablespoonful of green pepper, three tablespoonfuls of butter very slowly until tender. Add one and one-half cupfuls of lobster meat and sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful each of mustard, salt and paprika to taste, with a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a cupful of cream. Cook a minute or two. Place in ramekins or shells and bake well covered with buttered crumbs.

Fig Cake.—Beat three egg whites with one-half cupful of sugar and add a teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat three egg yolks with one-half cupful of sugar, the grated rind of an orange, a teaspoonful of baking powder sifted twice with a cupful of flour, add three tablespoonfuls of orange juice and fold in the egg mixture. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a cakepan, add one-half cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of chopped figs and a sprinkling of broken pecans. Pour over this the cake mixture and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. When done turn upside down and serve with whipped cream. Stewed apricots, canned pineapple or any fruit desired may be used for this delicious cake dessert.

In Old Celtic Lands

Of all the interesting trips in France, Brittany should be included, especially the south coast, with its resorts. This is the land of the "Pardons," those semireligious and semipagan festivals, when the villagers don the costumes and play the ceremonies which go back to the days of the dolmen and menhir of their wild moorlands. Paris—Nantes—Savenay—St. Nazaire is the route to follow, and the great Pardon centers are at Auray, St. Malo, Quiberon, Quimper, Daoulas, Plougastel and St. Anne-la-Palud, where the most important Pardon in Brittany is held on the last Saturday and Sunday in August. These old Celtic lands of France have a fascination different from the rest of France.

Chemists of Olden Days

The Egyptians appear to have possessed greater knowledge of chemistry than any other of the ancient nations. For one thing, it takes unusual skill to preserve a corpse for centuries in such perfect condition as the ancient mummies unearthed in Egypt happen to be. These people stood very high in the production of medicines and dyes as well as toilet soap, vinegar, metals, alloys, salts, glass and enamel. The Arabs, Greeks and Romans all obtained their knowledge of chemistry from the Egyptians without being able to add anything of importance to this knowledge.

Duties of Statesmen

"Our Government," by Garner & Capen, says that members of the cabinet cannot at the same time be members of either house of congress. They could, however, be allowed to occupy seats for the purpose of advocating or opposing the enactment of laws affecting their department and for giving explanations to congress and defending their policies against attack. This privilege could be allowed without amending the Constitution.

Famous Civil War Poem

The poem, "Sheridan's Ride," was written by Thomas Buchanan Read. Gen. Philip Henry Sheridan's famous ride through Winchester, his enthusiastic reception at the hands of his troops, his remarkable success in turning a disastrous rout into a brilliant victory, formed a dramatic episode of the Civil war.

Ox-Eye Daisy Not Wanted

Ox-eye daisies, not native to America, were brought into a garden of Yosemite years ago, but since they were brought to crowd out native species strenuous attempts have been made to deport them as undesirable from Yosemite National park.

Roman Trade-Marks

Marks found on relics of ancient Rome indicate that the manufacturers of that day used a system of trade marks.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

VEGETABLE FEAST

The raccoons had been having a very good time of late, eating some roots they had found in the ground, and other pleasant food.

But Father Raccoon thought that the children looked a little thin and that the color of their fur was not quite as good as it should be; particularly one raccoon child.

So he said they needed a change of food.

"What sort of a change are you thinking of?" asked Mother Raccoon.

"I thought a vegetable feast would be good for the children," said Father Raccoon.

"Yes," said Mother Raccoon, grinning, "I wouldn't mind a nice lot of vegetables myself."

"Neither would I, my dear," said Father Raccoon.

"Well, let's get started."

They all went off, for evening was close at hand, and the raccoon family love evening better than any other time at all.

Particularly do they like the evening for their marketing time and their food searching time.

They came back with some delicious vegetables, and after they had all tried some, Mother Raccoon said:

"Now, let's save the rest for tomorrow evening, when we will have the feast."

All the raccoons agreed to this, for, of course, they had tasted and tried a good many while marketing.

The next evening Mother Raccoon was ready for the feast, which was being given down underneath her tree home.

She had a house up in a high tree with no leaves on the branches.

Mother Raccoon sat curled up on the ground and all around her sat the children.

Father Raccoon then shouted: "The feast is about to begin."

All the raccoons shouted: "Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah, the feast is about to begin. Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah, we'll eat and not be thin."

The raccoons were all of a gray-brown color and their faces were pointed and black.

What a handsome family of children Mother Raccoon did have.

And then all the cousins, aunts, uncles, grandmothers all came along as the raccoons had sent out word that this would be a regular feast.

It was splendid one, and every one felt much better for having had such a marvelous meal and such a very, very good time.

The little raccoon whose slightly poor health had been the chief reason in the first place for the feast had enjoyed it as much as any of them.

And that was only right, for it was for his sake that the idea of a feast had been started in the first place.

Paper Race

Here is a new kind of race that causes a lot of excitement. Each player has half a sheet of newspaper, which he holds in his right hand. Now, at the word "go," they all start to roll up the paper as quickly as they can. They must only use their right hands, no other help is allowed. The winner is the player who first gets the paper in a ball tightly inside his hand. It is ever so difficult, you will find.

Desired a Solo

The violinist's daughter had a pet Alredale named Pal.

One day the mother was practicing for an appearance at a social function. Pal, outside the window, was giving a howling accompaniment. Finally the little girl came over to her mother and pleadingly said:

"Oh, mother, won't you please play something that Pal doesn't know?"—Liberty Magazine.

No Arguments

When Tommy went to spend a week at his grandfather's, he received 50 cents for incidentals, with the instructions to not "work" his grandparents for everything he wanted. At the end of the week he returned home with the original capital, and on being questioned, explained:

"Well, grandfather said he'd take care of all the little bills, and I didn't care to argue with him."

Japs Live Strictly Up to Auto Regulations

Mrs. L. W. Hoffecker of El Paso, in relating some of her experiences when she took her car to Japan for a motor trip, says:

"When we docked at Yokohama there was no gas in the car and I bought some before I drove into the customs yard. I then learned it was against the law to bring in gas without a manifest and if I drove the car out of the yard I would get arrested for smuggling gas.

"Then the courteous Japs, in order not to have to arrest me, helped push my car into the street and then told me to drive down to the police station for inspection.

"I was informed that I must have my tail light disconnected from the main switch so that I couldn't turn off my lights and run away in case of accident."—Los Angeles Times.

Machine Notes Changes

of Sunlight Earth Gets

The Scripps Institution of oceanography of the University of California is making a scientific study of sunlight, its effect on the human body, etc. For this study a new instrument, called the "thermoelectric pyranometer," has been developed. This pyranometer is more sensitive than any instruments ever used to record changes in the amount of sunshine reaching the earth. It registers changes in sunlight like the seismograph records tremblings in earthquakes. Changes in the amount of sunlight the earth gets, it has been pointed out, are due to causes within the sun itself and to shifting haze and clouds in the air.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Violin Resembles Human Ear

In an effort to improve the tone quality of the violin without detracting from resonance or volume, a German musician and inventor has made an instrument bearing a striking resemblance to a human ear, which produces sounds of great sweetness and purity. This violin, described in Popular Mechanics Magazine, has virtually been built on edge, the sounding surfaces, therefore, do not need to be curved to make room for the bow, and this, apparently, has increased the resonance of the instrument.

Departed Together

Edward Franks, a Washington (D. C.) jeweler, thought it would be a good advertising stunt to display a $500 bill, a $100 and a $50 bill in the window of his store. He arranged the display and, having to do an errand, locked the door of his store, leaving a friend to watch outside. When he returned a few minutes later the lock on the door, the $500 bill, the $100 bill and the friend had disappeared.

American Art for France

One of the most magnificent pieces of work of its type ever done in this country, a stained glass window 30 feet high and 15 feet wide, has been completed at the studio of Charles J. Conick, in Boston. It will be installed in the American church in Paris.

Can't PLAY
Can't REST
—child needs Castoria

WHEN a child is fretful and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it is a pretty sure sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago! A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted; comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more liberal doses it will

WHEN YOU CAN'T QUIT

Fatigue is the signal to rest. Obey it if you can. When you can't, keep cool and carry-on in comfort.

Bayer Aspirin was meant for just such times, because it insures your comfort. Freedom from pains that nag at nerves and wear you down. One tablet will block a threatening headache while it's still just a threat. Take two or three tablets when you have caught a cold, and that's usually the end of it.

Carry Bayer Aspirin when you travel. Have some at home. It will often "save the day."

From a grumbling tooth to those rheumatic pains, Bayer Aspirin is ready with its quick relief—and it always works. Neuralgia, Neuritis, Any nagging, needless pain.

Get the genuine tablets, stamped with the Bayer cross. Why experiment with imitations costing a few cents less? The saving is too little. There is too much at stake. But there is economy in the purchase of genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in the large bottles.
