

Catarrh

Whether it is of the nose, throat, stomach, bowels, or more delicate organs, catarrh is always debilitating and should never fail of attention.

It is a discharge from the mucous membrane when kept in a state of inflammation by an impure, commonly serotinous, condition of the blood.

MASCULINE HANDSHAKE HAS TAKEN THE PLACE OF THE FEMININE KISS.

THE newspapers are now chronicling the passing of the kiss. Of course, there may be some kisses still exchanged by unregenerate ones, but the kiss between women really seems a thing of the past.

Time was when one feminine met another feminine whom she knew, be it ever so slightly and be the place ever so inconvenient, that she kissed her, thus knocking her bonnet awry and severely rumpiling her temper and her collar.

When women didn't kiss they glared at each other and said, frigidly, "How d'ye do," and then all the spectators knew a fight was on, and their respective friends took the principals aside and asked anxiously: "What did she say about you?"

Particularly was such oculation a habit with Southerners, and when the clans met, as at church in the country, when they hadn't seen each other for a week or more, the exchange of caresses was so general that even the men became involved sometimes, and the boys only escaped through running away and hiding in the tall grass back of the edifice.

Then the fashion changed, and really elegant people who were not more than second cousins to each other began presenting a cool and freshly powdered cheek for the kiss instead of the lips. This was commenced with a regard for hygiene, no doubt, but it was soon so satisfactory that two cheeks were always pressed together now, and there was no pretense at a warmer greeting.

This had an additional advantage in that one lady could not call another lady Judas when she merely presented her cheek and not her lips.

A little later it went out of fashion to salute each other warmly at all when two women met on the street or in a public place.

It was bruited about that demonstration in public was in bad taste, and so since there must be some way of welcoming a friend, the manly handshake came in.

There were some elderly ladies who disliked this as masculine and un-fitting, and who persisted in pecking dutifully at the ears of their relatives, even when they met in the theater, but by far the majority of the sex took to the handshake as a diplomatic way out of trouble. You see it is very hard to reach the face of a person who wears a Gainsborough hat, while it is quite a simple matter to reach her hand.

And so there is no more kissing; at least, there isn't much. And it is quite beautiful to see the girls solemnly pressing each other's hands and asking after each other's health. But there is no lack of affection nowadays—dear me, no!—we are all quite as fond of each other as in the days of the perpetual kiss, and we are glad to be let down so easy in the matter of caresses.—Baltimore News.

RHODE ISLAND FISHHAWKS.

They Are Protected by the State at All Seasons.

The author of a recently published novel, the scene of which is laid in Rhode Island, refers to the fishhawk as "Rhode Island's best-loved bird."

Perhaps that is a true assertion, although the succulent turkey comes in for a fair share of the esteem bestowed by this little State on the feathered tribe, while Mrs. McNally's hen is unquestionably Rhode Island's most distinguished bird, says the Providence Journal. Not to quibble, however, it may as well be admitted that the fishhawk is a popular bird in Rhode Island and in all likelihood no other species which flies gets as much protection at the hand of his State as does his majesty. The statute forbidding his molestation in or out of the breeding season is as rigidly enforced as that applying to short lobsters.

Barrington, Warren and Bristol, the three townships forming Bristol County, afford favorite haunts for fishhawk to nest. From the train and street cars can be seen here and there supported on the limb of a great pine tree, a mass of sticks, leaves and rubbish, which the birds have collected for a home.

They are as little particular where they build as to the material which they combine into their house and the top of an electric light pole or the steeple of a church is as acceptable as the breeziest tree which ever supported a bird. Down on Long Island Sound is a fishhawk's nest in the strangest place of all. Not far from the imaginary lines bounding Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York, there runs into the sound a long reef, which is marked a mile or so from shore by a spindle. The end sticking above the surface of the water for ten or dozen feet bears a basket-like arrangement, which has struck a fishhawk as an ideal place for a summer home and there it has reared, as it has for several seasons past, a flock of hungry young birds. The wind always blows around the spindle, but the waves never leap high enough to threaten the nest and for miles at the oyster's front and back doors stretches the ocean, teeming with the fish on which it preys. A more desirable location for such a habitation it would be almost impossible to find. No other fishhawk need apply, however, for the present occupant holds a life lease of the premises and is fully prepared to defend it against all comers.

Some one sitting back of them ventured the information that it was General Wheeler, of Alabama.

"Well, I declare!" said the first one. "I've heard that a feller might be a good deal of a man at home, but when he come to Washington he wa'n't so much of a heavyweight; but I didn't suppose they'd dwindle away like that."

A Literal Scholar. Professor Ernest Huffcut, of the Cornell Law School, told an amusing story not long ago of a freshman who was called from the way of knowledge before his year was out.

The students had been answering questions in moot-court, and the subject under discussion was a cow which had been killed by a railway train. Each student was required to fill out a paper on the case.

"This brilliant youth," said Professor Huffcut, "wrote with all seriousness after 'Disposition of the Carcass,' 'Mild and Gentle.'"

Thank Pe-ru-na for Their Recovery After Years of Suffering

Miss Muriel Armitage, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance in a recent letter, says:

"I think that a woman naturally shrinks from making her troubles public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I feel for the sake of other suffering women it is my duty to tell what Pe-ru-na has done for me.

"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Pe-ru-na, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I thought this was the least I could do and procured a bottle. I knew as soon as I began taking it that it was affecting me differently from anything I had used before, and so I kept on taking it. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman today."—Miss Muriel Armitage.

Female Weakness Is Pelvic Catarrh

Always Half Sick are the Women Who Have Pelvic Catarrh

Catarrh of any organ, if allowed to progress, will affect the whole body. Catarrh without nervousness is very rare, but pelvic catarrh and nervousness go hand in hand.

What is so distressing a sight as a poor half-sick, nervous woman, suffering from the many almost unbearable symptoms of pelvic catarrh? She does not consider herself ill enough to go to bed, but she is far from being able to do her work without the greatest exhaustion. This is a very common sight and is almost always due to pelvic catarrh.

It is worse than foolish for so many women to suffer year after year with a disease that can be permanently cured. Pe-ru-na cures catarrh permanently. It cures old chronic cases as well as a slight attack, the only difference being in the length of time that it should be taken to effect a cure.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Pe-ru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

RHEUMATISM

AN INDESCRIBABLE TORTURE

Because Rheumatism sometimes comes on suddenly it doesn't prove that it is a chance disease or one due to accidental causes. It takes time for it to develop, and is at work in the system long before any symptoms are felt. The blood is the first point of attack, and the poisonous acids that cause the aches and pains are then distributed through the circulation to different parts of the system, and settle in joints, muscles and nerves; and when the system is in this condition it needs only some exciting cause like exposure to night air, damp, chilly weather, or the cold, bleak winds of winter, to arouse the slumbering poisons and bring on Rheumatism. The severity of the attack depends upon the amount of acid in the blood and the quantity of acid matter in the joints and muscles. Some people are almost helpless from the first, while others have occasional spells or are uncomfortable, restless, nervous and half sick all the time from the nagging aches and pains. Rheumatism is a disagreeable companion even in its mildest form. It grows worse as we grow older, and frequently stiffens the joints, draws the muscles out of shape and breaks down the nervous system. A disease that originates in the blood, as Rheumatism does, cannot be cured with external remedies like liniments and plasters; such things scatter the pains or drive them to some other part of the body, but do not touch the disease or improve the condition of the blood. The thin acid blood must be restored to its normal purity and strength, so that all poisonous substances may be carried out of the system, and no medicine accomplishes this in so short a time as S.S.S., which not only neutralizes the acids and counteracts the poisons, but builds up the general health at the same time.

RHEUMATISM IN ELBOWS, WRISTS AND KNEES.

Urbana, Ohio, Aug. 25, 1908.

Last winter I had a severe attack of Rheumatism. It started in the right elbow, and from there to my wrists; the right wrist was the worse. It became swollen and extremely painful. My left knee joint was the next place to be attacked. It became swollen and of course painful. The next point to be affected was the hip and ankle, which gave me much trouble. I was barely able to get about for some time. I was under treatment of a physician for awhile, but getting no better I began S. S. S., and after taking it for some time I was entirely relieved of the Rheumatism. All swelling and soreness disappeared. I consider S. S. S. an excellent remedy for Rheumatism and all troubles having their origin in the blood.

Know the Limits.

The late William M. Everts once discovered E. Deafield Smith, the well-known lawyer and corporation counsel of New York City, singing in church with all his heart. He whispered to a friend:

"Why, there is Smith singing 'I Want to Be An Angel.' I know he wanted to be district attorney, but I didn't know he wanted to be an angel."

The remark was repeated to Mr. Smith, and quick as a flash came the retort:

"No, I have never mentioned the matter to Everts, knowing that he had no influence in that direction!"

Alphabetically Answered.

A turn of the political wheel had placed the English Conservatives on top and lowered the Liberals.

Not long afterward a young and presumptuous member of the ruling government, who was sitting opposite a member of the defeated party at a London dinner party, took that time to say:

"Well, Mr. Blank, how do you like being an ex?"

"I should like it better if we had been succeeded by the y's" (wise), instantly retorted the Liberal.
