Candle in the Lamp Chimney.
Place a candle on a table and light it. Place a lamp chimney over it, and after a few minutes you will see the candle flame go out. This peculiar result is due to the rapid accumulation of the products of combustion in the lower part of the chimney. The vitiated air soon extinguishes the flame.

How can we still retain the protection of the chimney and avoid putting out the flame?

Of course we might place the chimney on three or four supports and thus, admitting plenty of fresh air at the lower end, insure perfect combustion by the circulation of the heated air. Such is the method we use in all our ordinary lamps.

But there is a more original solution of the difficulty. Place a bit of iron wire horizontally on the chimney top. A hairpin will answer. Then bend a visiting card, exactly the width of the chimney, in such a way that the hooked part will hang over the wire and the longer end hang down the chimney. You will thus have divided the chimney into two equal portions at the top by the aid of your little two inch diaphragm. From this instant you will observe that the candle burns with renewed vitality. The reason of this is that fresh air descends upon the flame on one side of the cardboard, while on the other rise the products of combustion.

This double circulation you may prove by holding a lighted match to the chimney top. On one side of the card its flame is sucked in, on the other side obstinately rejected.

In order to make sure that no air enters at the base of the chimney you can place it in a soap plate full of water.

Mysterious Jewsharp.

A jewsharp is placed at the mouth and apparently played for awhile by the finger in the ordinary way. Gradually, however, the young magician moves his finger away and begins beating time with it, while the jewsharp, strange to say, continues to play in the most marvelous manner.

In order to show his audience that there is no thread connecting his finger with the tongue of the harp he asks them to watch him while he passes his "magic" wand about it in every direction.

The trick is this: Your jewsharp must have a very flexible tongue, first of all. Cover the tip of it with a bit of sealing wax. Place it so that the tongue of it is inside your mouth.

Now place the tip of your tongue against the tip of the harp tongue and, pushing both out together, suddenly pull your tongue back.

You will find that the harp will twang in the same way as if you had pulled it out with your finger.

A little practice will make you able to play the jewsharp just as readily this way as by using your finger.

Of course, when you begin to show the trick you put your right forefinger to the mouth and move it as if playing in the ordinary way. This makes your audience believe that the tongue of the jewsharp is outside your mouth instead of inside.

Unable to Quarrel.

Two friends who lived together were so fond of one another that they had never once had a quarrel. But they saw that other men quarreled greatly, and they did not wish to be peculiar. At last one said to the other: "Let us have a quarrel as other men have. I will place this stone on the ground between us and say that it is mine. You claim it as yours, and thus we shall begin to quarrel."

The other agreed, and the stone was put in the midst between them.

"This is my stone," said one.

"No; it is mine," said the other mildly.

"I tell you it is mine."

"Very well," answered his friend,

"it is yours. Take it."

In short, they could not quarrel even when they tried, and they wisely resolved that they would live without doing so.

Don't Set Trees Too Deep.

Experiments in planting trees of different depths have been tested at a German experiment station with characteristic thoroughness. A number of trees were set at the usual depth and others at various depths, all lower than the nominal, to see what effect this would have upon the roots of the trees. In every case the tree, both in top and roots, grew more slowly with every increase in depth in planting beyond the usual depth.

Split Up the Flocks.

One of the chief reasons why poultry does not do well on some farms is because they are generally kept in one large flock, from 50 to 150 hens frequently. If the flock was divided up and not more than twenty-five kept together the result would be a general improvement in health and productiveness.

Taken With Cramps.

Wm. Krause, a member of the bridge gang working near Littleport was taken suddenly ill Thursday night with cramps and a kind of cholera. His case was so severe that he had to have the members of the crew wait upon him and Mr. Gifford was called and consulted. He told them he had a medicine in the form of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy that he thought would help him out and accordingly several doses were administered with the result that the fellow was able to be a sound next day. The incident speaks quite highly of Mr. Gifford's medicine.—Elkader, Iowa, Argus.

This remedy never fails. Keep it in your home, it may save life. For sale by Slocum Drug Co.

Violent Attack of Diarrhoea Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and Perhaps a Life Saved.

"A short time ago I was taken with a violent attack of diarrhoea and believe I would have died if I had not gotten relief," says John J. Patton, a leading citizen of Patton, Ala. "A friend recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I bought a twenty-five-cent bottle and after taking three doses of it was entirely cured. I consider it the best remedy in the world for bowel complaints. For sale by Slocum Drug Co.
