HEPPNER, FRIDAY, JUNE 25, 1888.

THE MALIUS FAMILY.

There are many stockmen in the country who are continuing about for pastures now to which they have driven their flocks.
The new settlers are forcing up the land and pitching up the soil, and while there is still a small area left for pastures, it is completely fenced in by those who have used it as it was.

As sharpmen who have the range in its paltry days recently remarked, by the time the rain and it's heat of the current in the morning, his leaders were into another true that stockmen can get along still, there are many who cannot stand the heat and for whom airing new range, go over and inspect the Malius country.

There is a vast amount of there, and most of it is a good stock

It is no longer an Indian reservation, but being a partly thrown open for settlement last year.

For a few acres at Camp Harris.

Those who have visited there do not think it is very well of it as a farming country, except down toward Shasta, not so good as last year, but where stock the Indians had always gotten through.

No doubt they at Camp Harris or southern end of the reservation is now open for horses and cattle, but the balance of the country must be considered free from stock.

The country is diversified, containing timbered ranges, broken ground and prairie flats, and along the Lower Malius is a stretch of white sage on which cattle and grow fast. From Canyon City it has been nothing but a good wagon road, and from Heppner the agency is a straight horseback line to Nevilsville in about 15 miles.

DIRECT WOOL SHIPPERS.

A good opportunity at present existed for the stockmen of the district to ship wool to eastern markets at very low prices. It would appear that the wool has not been and are in a position to hold in stock to ship by the C.

B. Hall, now on the north for

New York direct, at one cent per pound freight, that it is cheap enough to ship.
