Jones had been out in the woods and on his return had his arms ofull of what he fondly supposed were mushrooms. "What have you got there?" he was asked. "Mush-rooms," proudly replied Jones, "and they are daisy ones, too." "Let me look at them," said his friend. "Those are not mush-rooms." "What are they, then?" demanded Jones. "They are toodstools and very poisonous. Why, I lost six hogs once who died from the effects of eating toudstools." will be charged.
"Is that so?" asked Jones with visable alarm, and casting them from him in disgust; "then it wouldn't do for me to eat them of course.
