

THE SHERIFFS' CONVENTION.

If the purposes of the Sheriff's convention, which has been called to meet this month in Portland, is simply to form a general administrative society and have a good time among its members in the way of becoming acquainted and banqueting, there can be no serious question as to their personal rights to do so, but if it is to form a sheriff's trust, it would be of doubtful utility and its action would be looked upon with distrust by the public, and therefore unpopular.

On the other hand such a gathering, composed as it will be of experienced officers of the law, honored by their fellow citizens with positions of great responsibilities and trusts, would result in much good to the public from interchanges of thought, derived from their experience with the execution of the laws, from which suggestions of necessary changes in criminal laws to make them more efficient, would resolve into some practicable and efficient form. If it can inject new ideas and forms into our criminal law, which will secure the prompt arrest and early conviction of the too numerous class of dangerous criminals, the people of Oregon will hold them in grateful remembrance.

The most momentous question of interest which our people have in their police officials, is a more effective enforcement of the law concerning felonious crimes. They appear to be prompt enough to arrest and prosecute those who are guilty of misdemeanors, and petty violations of the statute, but the high felonies are on the increase, and some means should be adopted which would encourage the arrest of the criminal.

While it is the duty of police officers to make all reasonable efforts to arrest those guilty of felonies, it ought not to be expected that they should follow them on long trails, without a hope of remuneration. They should at least receive a return of their expenses on their long search for the offender. There is no good reason why they should be expected to roam over the country at their own expense, without some hope of a return of their expenditures, in the way of reward or otherwise.

With a warrant for an arrest of the officer may, if successful in making it, get his fees for service and mileage, but a failure results in a clear loss of time and expense, which is not likely to encourage any extended effort which may produce doubtful results.

A system permitting proper officials giving rewards for the arrest and conviction of criminals who commit the higher grades of felonies, would secure more efficiency in the detection of the law breakers, and give better security to the person and property of the citizen. It is manifestly unfair and unjust, on the part of the state to place the expense of running down and bringing to justice those who are guilty of a heinous crime against, not only the individual, but the entire state, upon the unfortunate victims who have suffered in their person or property. The crime though it may fall heavily upon the single individual is also one against society which forms the state.

So if the convention can suggest and formulate amendments, which will receive the favor of our legislators, that will make the arrest of criminals more certain and their conviction more speedy, they will have done the public a great benefit, and will do much to deter men from committing crimes—in the detection of the violation of the law, the speedy conviction and the certainty of punishment, lies the secret of safety to the person and property of the citizen.

THE E. O.'S MILLENNIUM.

Let every man devote his entire time to producing wealth in its varied forms and security will be unobtainable, or at least will be necessary for men to live off of their fellow men through speculation and the numerous forms of "making money" now in vogue. The producer is being robbed in order that the non-producer may enjoy fast horses, high living and great wealth. This is the reason that the farmers are being driven to the wall—they are feeding, or rather dividing their toil, among too many non-producers whom they are forced to support through class legislation. The campaign of education has just commenced.—East Oregonian.

No, no, it is not a "campaign of education" which is needed. We have too much campaigning of crude impracticabilities already. Education has been going on since the year one, and mankind have not yet reached the point of perfection satisfactory to the East.

OREGONIAN. We fear it will require several thousand years more, to educate man up to the standard required. It is the millennium it wants. That condition of the world which has been looked for, these many centuries, when the "lion and the lamb shall lie down together" in peace. It is nonsensical to talk about impossibilities.

What the world needs, to satisfy the E. O., is a new creation of inhabitants for this "mundane sphere." It is perfection it wants, and education will never accomplish that end until a change in the nature of man occurs. Education implies "many men of many minds" and brings forth many phases of opinions. So long as mankind have ideas and reason, they will have ambition, and having ambition will be sure to over-reach his neighbor. So to attain the ideal of the E. O., as above, there must be a radical change in the make-up of the human family. We want a new creation of men and women, without minds to reason, without wants, passions or desires, for whom it will not be necessary to "toil or to spin." The standard is too high for human nature to attain. But as the E. O. has taken a pretty big job, we only can wish it success and give it all the encouragement we can, for it is a job of tremendous proportions. Still we fear it will find many stumbling blocks in its way.

Of your time, reader, may perhaps be profitably devoted to the following:—Those who take an agency for a reliable enterprise, loans their business and stick to it, "get on" in the world. People who have any idea of engaging in any canvassing business will do well to write George Stinson & Co., Portland, Maine—the great art and general publishers. They offer the most exceptional advantages to those who are sufficiently enterprising to be willing to make a push in order to better their condition. It costs nothing to try. Women make successful canvassers, as well as men. Full particulars will be sent to those who address the firm; their full address is given above.
