PROHIBITION ZEAL.

A Fanatic's Attempt to Assassinate Bishop Whitaker. PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 31.—David Alexander, who tried to assassinate Bishop Whitaker Sunday last, pleaded guilty this morning before Judge Arnold. Dr. Andrews, of the city, testified that Alexander was sane on every other subject except prohibition. When asked by Judge Arnold what he had to say, Alexander rose, and in an eloquent way, addressing the court, said: "I always thought the church should help support poor widows and orphans, and when a man, the minister of a church, openly denounces prohibition, I, as a Christian, consider it a vile and base crime; but when a man ranks so high as a bishop I think he is guilty of a very vile crime, indeed, and a hindrance to the church, instead of a support. They speak of increase of the good cause and the church, but when a bishop is allowed to openly and publicly denounce prohibition, I think it shows a great decrease."

A PEDAGOGUE LOSES HIS GRIP.

He is Rotted in the Mud by His Pupils and Forced to resign his position. A dispatch to the Philadelphia Tribune from Walla Walla, Feb. 5, says: The life of school teachers is not a happy one. The life of Professor Llewellyn, principal of the Waitburg school, was not, at least. The professor is a kindly man, indulgent to his pupils and conducted the school to the satisfaction of everybody in the county, except the other pupils of his school, who disliked him for his efforts to make them attend to their duties. Yesterday afternoon the professor had some trouble with the elder pupils, and after school was out a number of them waited for him in a group. When he came out of the school-house, they set upon him, and throwing him to the ground, rolled him in the mud and stood him on his head. The pedagogue presented a very peculiar appearance when he came out. The boys then threatened him with more treatment of the same kind and then let him go. This made the professor angry, and to-day he resigned his position. He admitted that he could not control the boys.
