MORROW COUNTY'S OFFICIAL PAPER Foreign Advertising Representative THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

The Higher-Ups.

THE meeting of the members of the Umatilla Permitees association at Heppner on Saturday was one of much interest. With other associations of a similar nature there is to be an effort made to get before the higher-ups at Washington the demand that the ruling of the forest service compelling one night bedding out of sheep on the allotments to flockmasters within the national forest be done away with, and the unanimous action of the meeting here Saturday, as well as the backing of a representative to Washington in a substantial financial way, gives assurance that there will be something accomplished through this cooperating with the associations whose members hold permits in the other forests of Oregon and Washington.

The case of the sheepmen was very clearly presented by Herbert C. Bryson, attorney, representing the permittees association of the Wenaha forest preserve. Members of the Umatilla association also added testimony to strengthen the case, and as it has been impossible to get any modification of this obnoxious ruling of the forest bureaucrats, there is a determination that the matter will go up to Secretary Jardine for his decision. If this proves unavailing, then congress will be asked to act, and no let up is to be had until relief comes.

Secretary Jardine seems to strongly favor the idea of allowing the stockmen to run their own business, and this should be a privilege of theirs. These heads of the forestry service, sitting behind mahogany desks in Washington, work out very fanciful programs for the regulation of the national forest; in some of these rules are found just such objectionable features as that required of the sheepmen in the instance of bedding out. This has proved to be expensive and unsatisfactory in every way and the appeal to the forestry heads brings nothing but additional pressing down of the burden. The united effort of the stockmen who are compelled to find summer range in the national forest is going to do away with some of the grievances and should bring about better relations between stockmen and forest officials. If it takes an act of congress to bring this about, this should be demanded and put over. Western congressmen should certainly have sufficient knowledge in the matter to understand the wishes of the stockmen and work for their relief. Besides, it would be just about the right thing to let the west handle the forest situation all around, for it is here that the forests exist and here is where the people have the correct knowledge of how they should be handled. The fault does not rest with the men in the service who have grown up here; it is with the bureaucrats at Washington, who seem to favor the fanciful ideas of the eastern group.

We agree with Blue Mountain Eagle at Canyon City, who in discussing the question of forestry government, says: "We believe that we could take our present local forest officials and the stock association advisory board, and be given five years of administration and come out with the best governed, handled, and most efficient national forest in the United States. We would handle timber sales and all. And this would be a good experiment for the government." What the Canyon City paper says regarding the Malheur forest, within whose jurisdiction that portion of Grant county is located, is true of the Umatilla forest, and the suggestion is a good one.

The Postman's Present. IF Postmaster General New has his way about it, Christmas Day this year is going to be the biggest and best for all the employees of the postal service and especially for the ever-faithful letter carriers.

He has issued orders to postmasters throughout the country that their offices will be closed all day Christmas except for the dispatch of special delivery letters and parcels and special handling letters and parcels.

In order that the vast army of carriers and clerks may enjoy Christmas Day to the fullest extent with their families and friends, the cooperation of every man, woman and child in the United States will be necessary.

Under the leadership of the Postmaster General, a campaign is now under way throughout the country to instill into the minds of everybody the necessity of shopping and mailing early in order that there will be as little congestion at the postoffices as possible during Christmas week and in order that both the sender and receiver of gifts and remembrances may reap the happiness that is contemplated by such an exchange of presents.

Once more the Post Office Department urges the American public to do its Christmas shopping and mailing early. If the shopping is done now the buyer gets just what he or she wants and if the gift is mailed before December 15 it is sure to reach its destination in plenty of time before Christmas Day.

A Supreme Court View.

The Supreme Court of South Dakota has decided that the selling of gasoline by the state is unconstitutional and must be discontinued.—Northfield News.

COMMENTING upon this decision, brings to mind the point that the United States government itself is in the business of competing with private industry, and touching this we have the following comment by the N. E. A. Bulletin, organ of the National Editorial Association: "This decision as to the sale of gasoline simply affects a single state but the doctrine which it conveys is the same as if it affected the nation, namely, that it is not the idea of government that the state or the nation should enter into private business or encroach upon the rights of the individual to gain an honest livelihood.

"The attitude of the government in the printing and selling of envelopes is exactly of like nature with the selling of gasoline on the part of the commonwealth of South Dakota. Both are socialistic. It is not likely, however, that the state of South Dakota was engaged in selling gasoline at a loss while Uncle Sam is printing return cards on envelopes and selling them for less than cost charging up the loss to the taxpayers as a whole, which of course includes the printer. The practice is so unfair and unbusinesslike that it should be promptly discontinued. Printers and publishers will make a united demand upon the present congress for a discontinuance of the practice."

The government could just as consistently enter into the selling of clothing and groceries, farm machinery and automobiles on the same basis, so far as the principle involved is concerned, so the justice of the demands that are being made for the discontinuance of the printed envelope business on the part of Uncle Sam can be readily seen.

As indicating the fact that there is really money in raising good horses, is the item published recently of the sale by Mrs. Loula Long Combs, daughter of R. A. Long of Kansas City, of the saddle horse, Longview, to Mrs. W. M. Matson of San Francisco, for $25,000. This is said to be the highest price ever paid for a saddle horse. The animal is a five-gaited stallion, three years old, and carries in his pedigree four crosses of the great Harrison Chief, Kentucky's famous old sire, and founder of the Chief line.

A heavy rain recently fell at Miami, Florida and flooded the whole town. Not the only flood that has hit that part of the country, however; the real estate boomers from California and elsewhere, as well as thousands of others who expect to get rich quick have flooded the sunshine state, and results may be proportionately disastrous.

At a recent auction sale, a rare series of letters written by Benjamin Franklin brought $2,900. A lot of modern epistles bring more than that in breach of promise suits almost every day.

The basketball season is now on and basketball has one advantage over football. The yell leaders don't have so much room to jump about in.

FROM THE STATE MARKET AGENT

State Potato Inspector.

Following is a revised list of the potato inspectors of Oregon, under state-federal supervision: O. E. Freytag, Gladstone; J. J. Wirtz, Mt. Angel; Frank W. Groves, Lebanon; Leonard Raup, Eugene; Bert Huntington, Hillsboro; D. P. McElvany, 112 Citizens Bank Bldg., Portland; E. M. Eby, Redmond; W. J. Kokon, Hood River; M. J. Haynes, Sherwood; L. H. Stone, Troutdale; Paul Carpenter, Baker; A. R. Kirk, Milton; A. L. Morris, Warren; L. M. C. Anderson, Ontario; V. A. Vincent, Newberg. A. R. Kirk will handle inspection in Umatilla county until January 1, when he will go to Washington state in the inspection service. Another appointment will be made to fill his place.

What of Next Year?

Potatoes have been a profitable crop to Oregon farmers this year, or at least to those who did not contract early at low prices, says the state market agent, but he questions what the situation may be next season. "When the price of any product is high it is natural for farmers to increase production of that product the next year. If the big potato-growing states increase their acreage next year and the season should be favorable, then there is certain to be low prices again. Manufacturers produce according to the nation's needs. If farmers could do likewise, there would be fair prices and ready markets."

Wheat Prices Up.

Wheat prices have been steadily advancing and the growers who guessed right and held their grain are in luck. Only about 35 per cent of the wheat that usually comes to the Portland terminals has been received so far this year. "Evidence that the European wheat crop was over-estimated" is the reason given for the price rise by one of the big marketing interests, but perhaps the speculators could give a better one if they would.

Flax Industry Looks Good.

Indications are that flax growing in the Willamette valley will be of outstanding importance next year, says C. E. Spence, state market agent. With the state penitentiary and two mills to take the product, many farmers who have been experimenting with small tracts, are considering on much improved acreage. The valley is particularly adapted to this crop, but farmers have been waiting for greater market demand before producing to a larger extent. There are many predictions that both growing and manufacture will develop into large state-wide industries.

Wheat Growers' Conference.

Sixteen counties of Oregon, east of the Cascades, will hold an economic wheat council at Moro, Sherman county, February 11 to 13, under direction of the extension service of the O. A. C. The meeting will take up all phases of wheat production and marketing—supply, demand, management, finance, credit, handling, transportation, etc. It is expected there will be a large attendance from both Oregon and Washington.

Holding Up Oleo Law.

The last Wisconsin legislature passed a law forbidding the use of dairy products in the manufacture of oleomargarine, practically the same as the initiative bill submitted in Oregon. A Chicago oleomargarine company has held up the law on constitutional grounds and it will now take its course through the courts, doubtless going to the U. S. supreme court for final decision. Similar proposed legislation in other states will now wait the outcome of this test.

KITCHEN CUPBOARD

Cookies and Small Cakes

COOKIES made at this season are always good as long as they last and make a dainty bit to serve with a cupful of tea or cocoa when a friend drops in. Spice Cookies.—Cream one-half cupful of butter and one-half cupful of lard with one cupful of sugar. Add one cupful of molasses to the sugar, and shortening, one tablespoonful each of ginger and cinnamon, one teaspoonful of ground cloves, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda dissolved in one-half cupful of hot water. Mix and chill well after adding flour enough to roll. Leave in a cold place over night and bake in the morning. Leibkuchen.—Beat four eggs, add one pound of light brown sugar, two cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, two ounces of citron cut into thin slices, one-fourth of a pound of blanched and shredded almonds. Mix and bake in a sheet, cut into narrow strips five inches long. Frost before taking from the tins. Almond Cracking.—Shred and blanch ten ounces of almonds, put four ounces through a meat chopper and shred six ounces; beat the whites of two eggs stiff, fold in ten ounces of sugar, add the almonds and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of vanilla. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a buttered tin, spread one-fourth of an inch thick and bake a light brown. Cut into squares while hot. Anise Cookies.—Beat two eggs until very light, add slowly one cupful of sugar and beat the mixture for fifteen minutes. Add the grated rind of a lemon, and slowly two cupfuls of cake flour sifted with one-half teaspoonful of baking powder and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of salt sifted three times. Add two teaspoonfuls of anise seed and beat the mixture again for fifteen minutes. Roll on a floured board to one-fourth inch thickness, press a wooden springerle mold very hard on the dough, cut out the little forms and let stand ten hours on greased floured tins, then bake for fifteen minutes.

Kiddies' Evening Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

The Growing City

"I'm tired," said the city, "and discouraged." "What's the trouble?" asked the Queen of the Fairies as she perched upon one of the high buildings. "Oh, it is hard," said the city, "to be a city. You never seem to please anyone." "They build you up and tear you down and change you about until you are worn out." "Oh, but they do like you, City. I know they do," the Queen of the Fairies said. "Well, sometimes they don't show me that they do," the city answered.

"They will never let me add any charm or any manner—you know—city can't get its best manners in a short time. It takes a long, long time for a city to really be gracious and lovely." "Now it is different with the country. The country can be far simpler in its ways." "The country is naturally so beautiful. The country doesn't have to depend on handsome buildings and quaint places."

"The country has sunsets and sunrises and trees and fields and wild flowers and lots of color." "Of course the sun rises over in the East and sets over in the West here, but it's not the same as in the country—the buildings almost crowd it out of the way." "And the sun feels that, you know. The sun doesn't show himself nearly so much in the city for just that reason."

"But I wish they'd let me rest for awhile. I feel so like a child during the ages when he or she is growing so very fast." "I feel as though they were constantly letting down my skirts, or making something over again for me." "And I will not have any charm of my own, any particular attractiveness of my own. If I have to be rushed so."

"Now there was a lovely building down one of the streets and it would always have been beautiful to see." "I was very fond of that building. It was a touch to my city costume that I liked immensely. "But they tore it down—or nearly tore it down. They did enough to it so that none of its beauty was left. And they changed it all about—did horrible things to it. And that was one of my very best buildings."

"And it does tire me so. Of course I am growing and of course my city limits are being stretched and added to, all the time." "But when they destroy what few beautiful old folk to me, at any rate landmarks I have, I feel so sad."

"I feel so weary then." "I feel like giving up the whole job of being a city and moving out to the country myself. I feel as though I could just let them shift for themselves, so that it would be neither city nor country."

"But I suppose I'll keep on being a city, though it is a rushing, hard life at times." "Particularly when they won't let me have nice manners. They will pull me down and build me up and make me appear awkward and ill at ease."

"I appear awkward and ill at ease then." "Oh, I am so very tired." "Poor City," said the Queen of the Fairies. "Don't sigh. So many love you. So many love to poke through your queer, dear, different streets."

"So many love to wander all about you, to know you well," they say. "You are growing still. You must be patient for a time. For you're having growing aches and pains now. But you're loved by so many, many, many people!"

"Dear Queen of the Fairies," said the city, "how you have cheered me!" (© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

America is Safe with "Bull" Durham

A boat of Scientists left on a Gang for a year's cruise to study queer kind of Fish in the South Atlantic Ocean. They should have stayed here in New York and went to see and hear what I did the other day, a real Red Bolshevik meeting. They would have seen queer looking Fish there, Suckers, Eels, Flounders, Bullheads, and every Guy that got up was a big mouth Bass. They denounced everything in America, The Weather, The Constitution, White Gloves for Pall Bearers, Mah Jongg, Lower Taxes, Suspenders, Cross Word Puzzles, Shower Baths, League of Nations and Ice Cream Pies. After looking them all over I found what was the matter with them. There wasn't a one of them knew enough to roll his own. How are you going to improve on a Government if you don't know that much. Every man you see pouring "Bull" Durham into his paper, you can bet he is satisfied with America, because its the old right down to earth Americans that do it.

Will Rogers P. S. There is going to be another piece in this paper soon. Look for it.
