THE John Day Irrigation District, made up of land nearly all within Morrow and Gilliam counties with an enormous acreage that was to have been irrigated from the John Day river, finds itself in the position of the fellow who bought something and did not get the goods. The district should have followed the course pursued by the editor's father some 25 years ago.

A too well directed rock had laid low a big duck that belonged to a neighbor, and it was only a short time until the neighbor was on the front porch with Exhibit A in his hands and demanding payment. One dollar was handed as demanded, and the man started to leave with the duck in his hand. 'Didn't I pay a dollar for that duck?" demanded dad. The neighbor admitted that such was the case. "Very well, then," was the response. "Give me my duck."

But the irrigation district has paid a big sum of money for engineering, and, now that development is not to proceed, the engineer has all of the records and the taxpayers have nothing to show for it. It is possible that no more work will ever be done was gathered-and paid for should be public property, and be available if the matter ever again Page Alladin and comes up.

Women, Brains and Politics.

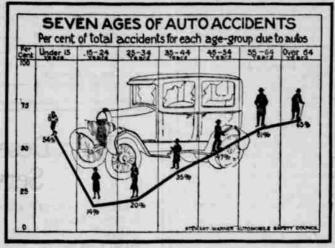

RHETA CHILDE DORR, not-ed writer, says that an outstanding woman with brains has as much chance of getting into Congress as Trotsky has.

'There are three women members of Congress, two of whom are widows, elected by the same machine that controlled their husbands," says the writer, who adds that "the same is true of the two women governors, one a widow, the other controlled by her husband and his machine."

Piling more fagots on the fire, this woman critic of her sex says she recently heard a speech in Congress that a high school girl wouldn't make. She also declares the same condition exists in local politics. All the women without brains, usually anti-suffragists and chosen by the bosses because the men know there is no real organization back of the anti-suffragists.

"Women are still being discriminated against," concludes the writer, "though they think they are in politics," all of which may be true in degree, but is not in any way peculiar to the sex. There are many men who think they are in politics but who in reality are only tools of hidden power behind the throne. Years of observation of nominations made from time to time at the command of man controlled machines here and there are quite conclusive proof of that fact. We fear though

SHAKESPEARE'S seven ages of mankind made no reference to the number who were cut off in their prime by automobiles. If he had, suggests the Stewart-Warner Safety Council, it might have run some-thing like this parody on his famous lines:

At first the infant, Killed by a truck while in his nurse's arms, And then the careless schoolboy with his marbles, Playing in the streets after his lessons Are over. And then the lover, Absent-minded, walking with a box of candy Under his arm, to see his loved one, Is struck by a taxl and hurtled to the ground.

Why I Am Not a Campbellite

"Alexander Campbell was a great student and an indefatigueable worker," said Mr. Bower at the church of Christ Sunday night. "He wrote a great deal, debated all comers and of pure cod-liver oil supplies a richness of vitamins that a child needs to assure sound bones and teeth. It is easy to take—its benefits are lasting.

"Coming out of Catholicism the older reformers advocated specific re-forms whereas Campbell advocated a return to the pattern of the New Testament church in every particu-lar." In summing up his life, Mr. Bower said, "While Alexander Campbell deserved to rank among the very highest as a religious leader and teacher we are not to follow him or wear his name for the six reasons hereinafter stated. hereinafter stated.

"First, because he was human, Human wisdom reached its highest peak with Solomon and Jesus is the only one who can claim higher wisdom which he did, saying of Himself, "Behold a greater than Solomon is here."

In the second place Mr. Campbell had no authority. He had as much authority as any man (or woman), which is none whatever. If we wish authority for religion we must have a 'thus saith the Lord,' for Jesus said, 'All authority has been given unto me.'

"Again Mr. Campbell made mistakes. So did the earlier reformers and so do all men. So has every philosopher and human teacher. Jesus is the only one of whom it can truthfully be said, 'He hath done all things well'

"Looking further into the matter that Campbell did not found the church. In common with all the other reformers he did not even desire to. He tried earnestly to point out to men the original church, the church of the New Testament. He advocated the dropping of all hu-man names and of every addition to the church as spoken of in the scrip-tures. But Jeaus is the founder of the church for he said, (after Peter confessed him to be the Christ, 'Up-on this rock I will build my church and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it."
