INFLUENZA.

From State Board of Health. While it is not cause for serious alarm there is an increasing number of cases of influenza being reported from all parts of the state. Influenza in a mild form is constantly present. The real world-wide pandemics have usually been preceded by a number of smaller epidemics which passed unnoticed.

Influenza has been hailed by successive generations as a new disease. It is, however, an old disease, and epidemics are recorded as early as 1500 A. D. Except in time of epidemics it is difficult to distinguish between cases of true influenza and severe colds or mild infections of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes. The disease is, however, easily recognizable when it occurs in epidemics. The diagnostic difficulty in connection with the disease is due to the fact that the disease only occurs in uncomplicated form during the early stages of an epidemic. Uncomplicated cases are almost never fatal.

Influenza is an acute, extremely contagious disease resembling a severe cold, with fever, pain in the head, eyes, ears or muscles. It comes on suddenly and the general weakness is entirely out of proportion to the other symptoms. The disease is extremely infectious. It is transmitted by saliva and mucus thrown out by coughing, spitting and sneezing, and can probably be indirectly transmitted by contact with eating utensils and perhaps, to some extent, by dust. The causative agent of influenza is not known.

Susceptibility seems to be universal and the disease spreads through communities with speed and ease which indicates that there is very little natural resistance in the normal individual. The real menace of influenza is due to its complications, because it lowers the patient's resistance, especially his resistance to respiratory infections and thus makes him an easy prey to pneumonia.

The common cold should be regarded as a serious matter. The prevention of influenza is largely a personal matter. Effective measures depend on the voluntary subjection of the habits of the individual to the public good.

Everyone should realize the serious nature of a "cold." A cold may be most anything from a trivial "cold in the head" to pneumonia. The infection may vary from the very mild to the most virulent known to medical science.

"YOU ARE ENTITLED TO KNOW THE FACTS." DODGE BROTHERS, INC.

Over a Cliff in this STEEL BODY without injuring the DRIVER!

A careless driver . . . A triple somersault over a cliff . . . and this is the car—a Dodge Brothers all steel safety car.

A triple somersault over a cliff with the car you see in this picture! Such was the experience of its owner, who came through the fall uninjured. After an hour of repair work, he drove the car from Montana to Minneapolis—a more sensible driver and much wiser. All steel construction saved his life, as it has saved many other lives in the past, and will save thousands more in the future Dodge Brothers print this advertisement because they believe motorists are entitled to all steel safety and should insist upon it. That's why Dodge Brothers introduced all steel construction more than eleven years ago—and recently announced additional all steel safety features. The streets are swarming with 20,000,000 motor cars—millions more are on the way. Safety is the issue. Armor yourself and your family with steel.

Dodge Brothers Motor Cars—both open and closed—are all steel in the strictest sense of the term. Steel reinforced by steel—framed, braced and buttressed by steel—with all seams solidly and permanently welded together by electricity. Slim steel pillars replace the old bulky wooden corner posts—permitting unparalleled driving vision—a safety feature of the first importance. Compare such bodies with the usual wood, or wood-and-metal body, and you will be astonished that every automobile builder has not adopted this advanced safety construction. Remember, also, that safety is the watchword of Dodge Brothers construction throughout, as witnessed by Dodge Brothers exceptionally large, quick-action brakes, and the exceptional ruggedness and dependability of Dodge Brothers axles, frames, steering parts, and other vital units.

This car will continue to be a "four".
