A Good Show.

HEPPNER'S 1926 Rodeo was a good show. We believe it to be a fact. For, when the majority of the crowds such as witnessed it, stayed through the whole performance enduring the raw, cold wind that chilled to the marrow, it must have been a good show.

The show moved off rather slowly on Thursday, the more noticeable because of the cold. This was largely due to the illness for a week previous of Chairman McNamer, which prevented his having complete hold on the situation.

Eggs—and More Eggs.

REMEMBER the good old days when there were only two kinds of eggs—good and bad? There were no shades, no variations, no particular desire on the part of anyone anywhere to establish "grades."

That's all changed now. A chain grocery store in New York has just added this sign to its collection relating to eggs: "Eggs—fresh-laid by young chicks!"

Old-timers and folks who aren't too finicky will wonder just why it is necessary to advertise the age of the egg producers. A good old hen who has led a respectable life should be able to produce as delicately flavored breakfast egg as any flapper pullet.

It's all a matter of a few pennies lured from our pocketbooks

"NEWS and PROGRESS" No. 7

ECONOMIC SIGNIFICANCE AND SERVICE OF THE AMERICAN NEWSPAPER AND NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING—From latest volume in Manhattan Library of Popular Economics, republished in serial form through courtesy of Bank of the Manhattan Company, New York.

DISTRIBUTING THE NATION'S GOODS

THE American newspaper is, by its very nature, a local institution, its own community's mirror, voice, market place and leader. But, just as America is a national community, composed of thousands of local centers, so the American press as a whole is a unit, formed by nearly 14,000 local papers which reflect the national life.

In this capacity newspapers together perform a nationwide economic service comparable to that performed by each for its own community. Connected up for the transmission and exchange of news they form a national market place in which knowledge of the goods of any locality may be found.

The many units of this huge nation are not self-contained, but interdependent. This is because of the degree in which different sections specialize. California and Florida produce many times the quantity of oranges which they can consume. Filled as are the streets of Detroit with automobiles, these are but a small fraction of the number made in that city's great plants.

So it is with innumerable other products. It is a process of ceaseless interchange by which each community gets whatever it may require, wherever it may be produced. Accordingly, every reader has a natural interest in many products of other regions as they are made known to him through the columns of his local newspaper.

How prodigious is the volume of newspaper advertising in facilitating this process is disclosed by the fact that of the $750,000,000 used in such advertising in 1925, nearly one-third was paid by producers of goods which are distributed throughout the nation.

Any one who begins to list the various kinds of goods purchased by him in the course of a year is likely to discover with surprise how much of an "ultimate consumer" he has become. At the same time, he probably will realize that many of his purchases are of makes already familiar to him through advertising. One naturally assumes that a producer takes pride in an article which he deems worth advertising, and one expects that the quality associated with a certain name or trade mark will be the same wherever the product may be found.

Moreover, experience has shown that the price is likely to be lower on a widely advertised article than for a similar but unadvertised one. In instance after instance it has been found that as advertising began to widen sales, the great economies of quantity production lowered costs and reduced prices, so that the sums invested in printer's ink were not added to but subtracted from the amount paid by the consumer.

Not until we consider the province of the newspaper as an aid to distribution do we arrive at an adequate conception of its contribution to the economic progress of the country. In the vast and intricate plan of voluntary co-operation one essential factor is a unified market whereby the products of our agriculture and our industrial plants may be distributed to the widest possible area, at the least cost and with maximum rapidity of sales.

Just as our newspapers have unified our thoughts, aims and ambitions, so have they made possible the distribution and the sale of our national merchandise. In much the same manner that an important piece of news, of interest to all, is, in a single day, broadcast to every corner of the land, so can the message of a product be distributed by the advertiser. And now it is an accepted fact that this message also is "news."

What They Could Do.

MANY Willamette valley farmers and business men have expressed disapproval of the proposed constitutional amendment initiated by the Housewives Council of Portland, because of the almost unlimited powers it would confer on the board of five members, one woman and four men, named in the text of the measure, none of whom has experience in construction, operation or management of the utilities which the amendment proposes.

Florida Will Rebuild.

MIAMI will rise again, greater and more famous than ever before," says Mayor Rumpf, chief executive of the great Florida city struck down by the recent hurricane. Northerners may well believe this. Miami, and all other stricken cities, went to work immediately to rebuild their homes and places of business.
