

COOLIDGE SUPPORT CITED REAL ISSUE

Oregonian-Journal Scrap Mere By-Play, Believes Mail Tribune.

(By Republican Central Committee.)
The controversy that rages between the Oregon Journal and the Morning Oregonian over qualifications of their rival candidates for the position of United States senator has nothing at all to do with the campaign issues but is merely diverting by-play, believes the editor of the Medford Mail Tribune. That seems to be the sensible way of looking at the matter.

In the heat of the campaign numerous false arguments are advanced and undue emphasis is often placed on various statements that have little or nothing to do with the real decisions to be made by the voters on November 2. The real issue, as the Mail Tribune editor sees it, and he is dead right, is whether the voters of Oregon want a republican senator at Washington or a democratic senator.

Neither the congress nor the president can accomplish much without the support of the other. More effective national progress will be made when both are of the same party faith.

There is at present a republican congress working with a republican president but the margin in the senate is slight and election of a democrat or two may turn the scale and give the senate to the democrats. The issue comes down to whether the people of Oregon want to back up and support President Coolidge and his policies or whether they do not. If they do, they will vote for Steiwer, nominee of the president's party for senator, and if they do not, they will vote for Haney because a vote for Haney will be a vote of repudiation of the president. That is what the campaign is all about.

HELPING NATURE FIGHT DIPHTHERIA

(From State Board of Health.)
A state wide campaign to wipe out diphtheria began in Oregon October 1st. The State Board of Health urges every physician to use diphtheria antitoxin and toxin-antitoxin.
Diphtheria germs when they get into the throat of a person who is in condition to take diphtheria, develop a powerful poison called toxin. It goes into the blood stream and is carried all over the body. Perhaps at some time you have spilled a strong acid on your hand. Unless it was removed or neutralized immediately, it destroyed some of your skin, and left you with a sore hand. If diphtheria poison is of sufficient quantity, and it comes in contact with the nerves and other vital organs of the body, its effect is comparable with that of the acid on the skin. It was this destruction of nerve structure that accounted for the paralysis which so often followed an attack of diphtheria in the days before antitoxin came into general use.

If a child gets diphtheria and is not given antitoxin, one of two things happen. Either he dies from the effects of the poison or toxin if the attack is a severe one, or if it is mild, he recovers readily, but with his vital organs more or less damaged. When he recovers it means that nature in its efforts to counteract the effects of the poison, has gradually produced in his blood an antidote called antitoxin which combines with the poison or toxin and makes it inert, very much as the application of soda or some alkali would neutralize the acid on your hand, if it has been applied at once. Following recovery this antitoxin remains in the blood for years and while it remains, it protects against further attacks of diphtheria, or in other words, the child is then immune to diphtheria.

However, when one attack of the disease protects the child against another, it is a highly dangerous procedure. Death or serious damage may result before nature unaided can finish the job. Fortunately we no longer have to wait. We have learned how to assist nature and protect the child so that he will not take the disease.

Diphtheria today is known to be both curable and preventable. This seems almost incredible to many people for only thirty years ago death claimed more than one-third of those attacked by the disease, as the effective protective measures were unknown. This advance in medical science stands as one of the major medical triumphs of all times.

HARDMAN.

Eddie Russell of Condon was a visitor of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Leathers Monday, Oct. 5th.

Mrs. George Burnside has moved to Hardman for the winter where her three children will attend school. Lee and Burton are students of the high school while Betty is a student of the grades.

Several young people of Hardman journeyed over to Top, October 9th, where they attended a big dance. They reported a good time.

Mrs. Frank Wilks of Baker, Oregon, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Ayers.

W.H. Ayers returned home from The Dalles Thursday where he had spent several days.

Kenneth Burnside was thrown from a bucking horse Sunday. He received several bruises which will likely keep him from work for several days.

G. A. Bleakman, chairman of the Hardman Union school board, appeared before the student body Friday, October 8. He spoke concerning the purpose and procedure of our courts.

UNITED DELEGATION GETS OREGON MORE

Portland, Ore., Oct. 13.—Haney's contention that a divided delegation at Washington is more effective than one united and in harmony with the administration should fall upon unheeding ears. Particularly so when in support of his contention he quotes inaccurate figures.
He said in a recent speech at La Grande that while Oregon was making every effort to get $375,000, Washington was given recognition for reclamation purposes to the amount of $8,000,000.

Both figures are wrong. That for Washington should be $9,000,000 and for Oregon $30,000,000. Washington, with a divided delegation in the United States senate, won the Kittitas project that will cost $9,000,000. Oregon, with a united team of senators, won the Owyhee, Vale and Baker projects, costing $20,000,000, $5,000,000 and $5,000,000 respectively. The Baker project was later held up by Secretary Work, it is true, but that had nothing to do with the senatorial delegation's political faith.

It is true this money is not yet in hand and neither is that the case in Washington. Small portions of the cost have been appropriated and the remainder will come in due course because the policy to develop these projects has been defined.

Washington, too, accomplished less than appears on the face of the figures for in the case of the Kittitas

Art Yergens and George Weiss are employed for the time being in the fruit industry at Yakima.
Fred Markham and family have returned to our midst for the winter. The older children entered the grade school this week.

Everyone is invited to come out Friday afternoon at three o'clock to see the football game on our grounds—Irigan versus Boardman. Come out, the boys need your backing.

A number of our young folks attended the big dance at Hermiston Saturday night and report a hilarious time.

Do not forget the school carnival on the night of October 30.

Unseen Sources of Long Life

The basic sources of automobile value are not always apparent to the eye.

A motor car, like a house, may LOOK a great deal more substantial than it really is.

Because of this difficulty, more and more thousands are turning to Dodge Brothers product for insurance against disappointment.

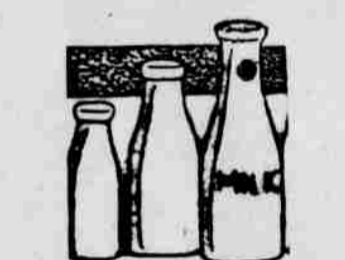

The years have proved, and each year proves anew, that Dodge Brothers are as deeply concerned with the UNSEEN goodness of their motor car as with the seen.

The mileage it will deliver, the safety it will provide, the expense and trouble it will save the owner over a period of years, are quite as important to Dodge Brothers as the more obvious details of equipment and style.
