

WOMEN

Their Homes and the World Outside

By KITTY BARRY CRAWFORD.

COULD a wee foreign actress in a foreign-made play teach our luscious American screen stars anything? Apparently. Read about Mady Christian in "The Waltz Dream." New Yorkers enjoyed this film during July and August. You may see it any time from now on:

MADY CHRISTIAN, an European actress, starred in a Viennese film exhibited during the summer in New York, captured the imaginations of all who saw the picture. Mady is so different—so delicately elusive, so adept at producing effects in the simplest terms—that you will cast about for her equivalent on the American screen and find it not at all.

GO to see her several times. It will be worth while. Look first at the wonderful silent actors in the film. The marvelous old buildings of Vienna, with their arches and lace-work in stone. The streets and parks, so unlike those of this country, the monument of the waltz king, Strauss. Note, too, the color and movement of the peasant wine festival, essentially Viennese.

NEXT study how daintily the principle of joy in living is stressed throughout the film. Reminiscence thru your memory and find out if it has been done with as much subtlety in any of our big American pictures. If, indeed, it has ever been done in this country so well at all. Give in to this quality of the picture. Let yourself feel that Vienna really is a city of joy.

AND last, study Mady, herself. See how she guards the inexpressible emotions with a hedge of beautiful restraint! It seems, often, that the very word, restraint, has been lost from the emotional dictionaries of our own screen players. Notice, too, how little the things of the senses are accented. When the young man the princess afterwards marries gives her a kiss, it is a swift salute. Not a climax. Just a surprise. "What is that?" Mady, in the character of the cool princess asks. "A kiss, your Highness," the young man tells her. And that, surprisingly enough, is exactly what it is.

WILL you be able to say: "That is a good picture?" Possibly not. Often the best things are little noted. David Falherly made a wonderful movie in "Moana of the Seas." A picture I anticipated for months. And found no what disappointing. The exquisiteness of some of its scenes stands out as one of my really memorable experiences. I have seen it again and again. Yet this picture was not a notable financial success.

FLORENCE MACBETH and Mario Chamlee, two American artists, opened the series of opera given during this summer in Ravinia Park, Chicago, with a performance of "Lucia." Alice Gentle, another popular American singer, was presented in the title role of Carmen, with Edward Johnson, American.

OF the 31 artists in the company this summer, 10 were Americans. They are: Florence MacBeth, Mario Chamlee, Luella Mellus, Alice Gentle, Marjorie Maxwell, Helen Freund, Edward Johnson, Philine Falco, Ruth Page, the premiere dancer, and Earl Delamarer, director.

ENTHUSIASTIC praise from the critics has justified the choice of Americans on Ravinia program. It is not merely that the movement to give Americans a chance has gained support. But the Chicago programs demonstrate that Americans belonged to them by reason of genuine merit. The American artists in the company received recognition not because of patriotic propaganda, but because of the public's interest in good music.

DR. HALL, 5TH PRESIDENT, U. OF O.

University of Oregon, Eugene, Oct. 14.—At the Semi-Centennial celebration, Oct. 18-23, on the first day of the fifth president of the University, Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, will be inducted into office in the presence of noted educators from all sections of the country, students, faculty and several hundred citizens of Oregon. Members of the faculty and the distinguished visitors, many of whom are coming to appear on the conference programs, will appear all during the week in full academic regalia and the insignia of their various universities. More than 155 colleges are to be represented. Four presidents, whose administrations cover a period of 50 years, precede Dr. Hall. When Deady hall opened its doors in the fall of 1876 to some 40 students, John Wesley Johnson was president. For 17 years he guided the struggling little university through the vicissitudes encountered by educators in a pioneer state. On March 30, 1893, President Johnson resigned, and Dr. Charles H. Chapman of the State Normal school Milwaukee, Wis., formerly a professor in John Hopkins university, took office July 25 of the same year. Dr. Chapman served for six years, leaving June 5, 1899, to take up newspaper work in Portland. From June 15, 1899 to July 1, 1902, Dr. Frank Strong of Yale university, served. Twice the board of regents had invited Prince L. Campbell, head of the Normal school at Monmouth, to become president of the University. The first time he refused because he felt that the normal school needed his services, but on the second invitation he accepted. He took office May 3, 1902 and devoted the best 24 years of his life developing the institution. It was during President Campbell's administration that the rapid growth of the University took place. During his last ten years enrollment trebled. As a memorial to President Campbell, who died August 14, 1925, the fine arts building will be erected, and at the Semi-Centennial special exercises are scheduled to dedicate the building. On Friday, October 22, a memorial will be erected to the memory of President Johnson, which will be attended by alumni from the first few classes.

Shifts in Dairy Cattle Make for Better Stock

Thirteen "boarders" sold, one "scrub" sire disposed of, and two purebred sires bought, is the summary of the Oregon cowtesting association report for August as prepared by N. C. Jamison, dairyman of the Oregon Agricultural college extension service. Month by month these reports show that Oregon dairymen are shifting their herds about for improvement of stock. In the course of five years this process has wrought a great change for the better in Oregon dairy cattle, said E. B. Fitts of Penn State college, who judged dairy cattle at the state fair this year. The report shows that 3564 cows were tested in the August association work. They averaged 6443 pounds of milk carrying 28.44 pounds of butterfat. And 545 cows produced as much as 40 pounds of fat each, or more. The honor purebred cow of the associations was a Holstein owned by G. J. Devoes of Lane county. She gave 2427 pounds of milk having 101.9 pounds of fat. The honor grade cow was a Holstein-Jersey owned by Mr. Devoes. She produced 2021 pounds of milk with 96.9 pounds of fat. The honor purebred herd was W. F. Fischer's, seven Jerseys averaging 943 pounds of milk with 50 pounds of fat. The honor grade herd was Mr. Devoes' averaging 119.8 pounds of milk with 53.9 pounds of fat. The feed trend is said by Mr. Jamison to be hard to determine this winter as no one can say how hard the winter will be or what the real demand may be. Reports indicate a slight shortness of normal supply, suggesting the advisability of looking well into the winter feed needs.
