Tuberculosis In Oregon.

(By State Board of Health.)

To eradicate tuberculosis completely from the State of Oregon it will be necessary for each individual or head of the family to be sufficiently informed on the subject of tubercu-losis to know that this disease is both curable and preventable. Everyone should be interested not only in tuberculosis but other diseases which greatly influence the lives, happiness and conduct of so many people. Ap-proximately 600 persons die from tu-berculosis in the State of Oregon each year. Nearly 6,000 are sick with tu-berculosis part of the time and at least 3,000 are under constant treat-ment for the disease.

The amount of suffering is incalcuable and the economic cost of caring for this large number of patients runs into thousands of dollars annu-Tuberculosis is just as preva lent, if not more so, in other states. Tuberculosis is the most widely dis-tributed of all diseases. Wherever mankind becomes massed in groups tuberculosis appears. It is no re-spector of person. It has claimed many of the world's great men and women. It is no disgrace to have been a victim of this disease. It is, however, unforgivable to communi-cate this disease to others. A tuberculosis patient who follows the san-itary regulations can be a real asset to the community by establishing good sanitary habits which his fellow citizen would do well to adopt. Environment is a significant factor in the production and maintenance of tuberculosis. A large number of cases can be traced to the home. Tuberculosis occurs in households. In actual fact there commonly is an existing source of infection within the household. This may be present in a readily recognized consumptive or more frequently in a member of a household hardly suspected of be-ing tubercular, i. e. the elderly rela-tive with so-called bronchitis.

Tuberculosis is an infective process, for the most part of slow, in-sidious nature. In its earlier stages it is highly tractable. It is easily arrested under suitable conditions of environment, but is correspondingly persistent in the absence of these.

The sanitarium provides isolation facilities in an active stage of the disease when the patient is discharging millions of tubercle bacilli, there by removing him from his family and associates and diminishing the liklihood of infection and disease among them.

Tuberculosis is a communicable dis-ease. Tuberculosis is preventable. Tuberculosis is curable. Sanitaruim treatment will both prevent and cure an expense but an investment which paign to eradicate tuberculosis.

Every good citizen should give this situation serious consideration when he casts his vote at the next election A vote for the sanitarium is a vote for humanity.

Many branches of agriculture, as well as other industries, are benefitted by the protective tariff. That portion of our agricultural popula-tion which is engaged in the produc-tion of wheat does not fully enjoy these benefits and will not while the domestic markets are influenced by markets abroad. Agriculture is en-titled to a full and fair consideration. It cannot permanently endure against unfair discrimination. The farming elements of America make up almost 40 per cent of the buying power of the nation. Every other line of incustry is therefore benefitted by aid extended to sgriculture. America consumes each year about six hun-dred million bushels of wheat. We normally have for export something like 200,000,000 bushels in addition to the amount consumed at home. The export wheat must be and is sold up on foreign markets and in competi-tion with the free trade countries of the world where the standard of livag and wages is far inferior to ours.
The price which we receive for this exportable surplus, to a large extent, fixes the price of the wheat consumed nace the price of the wheat consumed a home. The wheat farmer, therefore, is not permitted fully to enjoy the benefit of American prosperity and will not be until a method is provided for disposing of the exportable surplus without destroying local markets. America owes to the farmers a duty of early action. The federal congress must find and provide a solution for this problem of exportable congress must find and provide a solution for this problem of exportable surplus. In a platform statement which I published early in the year I committed myself as follows:

"I stand for justice to the farming industry. Unless the farmers can produce and market their products profitably all branches of society must suffer. I will work for legislation to aid in the orderly marketing of exportable surplus and will give every assistance to the constructive efforts now being put forth to balance and stabilize agricultural production and

Man is incurably religious. Man ease. Tuberculosis is preventable. Tuberculosis is curable. Sanitaruim treatment will both prevent and cure tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is increasing in Oregon on account of the lack of facilities to care properly for persons suffering with this disease. More beds are needed to take care of those who are indigent and in need of sanitaruim treatment. The providing of an adequate number of beds is not an expense but an investment which does not possess a religion but relig-
