IN "BAGDAD" FILM

Douglas Fairbanks will, in "The Thief of Bagdad," at the Star theater Sunday and Monday, transport his audience to the land of mystery and romance, where all things are possible and all dreams come true. This "Thief of Bagdad" is, according to all accounts, a clorious funtasy of the Mrs. Sweek.

Miss Helen Wells, attending the state normal school at Monmouth, arrived home the end of the week to spend the Christmas vacation season with her father, Assessor J. J. Wells and other members of the family. Greatest of all is the adventure which lies in the Magic Carpet on which the Thief and Princes. cess soar over the house-tops. The plamour and thrills that came with a childhood reading of the "Arabian Nights," are doubled in "The Thief of Bagdad." It is said to be a remarkable visualization of the glories of Old Bagdad, with nothing to man the beauty or to weaken the intensit of the fantasy. The fantastic spirit Washington student, arrived home the end of the week from Seattle to spend the Christmas holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Mahoney.

District Attorney Notson returned ways, walls and even the rose blush illusion is complete. It is a land of drenms and romance, where humor, however, is not unknown and where "happiness must be earned." Douglas Fairbanks is said to have selected a splendid role, the greatest of his career. It is, then, Fairbanks at his best—the Fairbanks who scales walls, drops into rose bushes, leaps over anything that obstructs his way, and rides prancing horses through the Miss Mary Clark arrived home on clouds, and soars over the house-tops

The Pine Tree and a Christmas Inspiration

HE creaking, crunching snow under foot, as well as the crisp, frosty air bespoke a temperature some degrees below zero. How ever, native mid-westerners looked anticipated and expected a quantity of snow and cold weather for the Christmas holidays. Their expectations were usually right, with an added cold stretch long before the holidays, and long after bulky, stone Central Administration building of the college was delightfully contrasted against the dead white, fluffy, fairy-like snow all about it. This building, as did four others, faced a huge stretch of campus, with groupings of trees scatered pleasingly about to break the wide expanse. Trees, heavily hung with the almost artificial looking cottony webbing formed an artistic group across the road and in front of the building. In the center of the group stood a well-formed, tall, perfect specimen of a long-needled pine. It was singled out to be the proud possessor of many-colored lights distributed about generously among its branches. Deserving of praise was this awesome tree, and its surroundings.

The hard lines of the massive

Silhouetted against the sky, formsinouettee against the sky, forming a background for the proud pine tree stood the campanile, the pride of every student on the campus. In the dull afterglow of the winter twilight the chimes were extelling the Challenge and the state of t extolling the Christmas carols.

At the foot of the narrow winding staircase of iron which leads to the belfry of the campanile, upon close inspection could be seen a maid and young man-not the first time, nor would it be the last time campanile should witness such light. The meeting had been planned in view of their separa-tion on the morrow when both would go to their homes. Moved by the sight of the proud pine, its symbolism, and the chimes, they bade each other farewell in fond embrace, carrying away with them the spirit of the proud pine tree in their hearts.—Eleanor E.
