Town Gravediggers.

MILTON EAGLE. IN NEARLY every community may be found quite a number of persons who consider themselves leading citizens, but who in truth are helping to dig a grave for their town.

They do it through their failure to support the institutions which make the town what it is. They do it by sending away for merchandise which might be bought with equal advantage at home.

They do it frequently through thoughtlessness, but oftener through sheer disregard for the welfare of the community of which they are a part.

The doctrine of buying at home is not advanced solely in the interest of individual merchants. It is advocated because every citizen of a town is to a certain extent dependent upon every other citizen for his own prosperity.

Business men are sometimes as greatly at fault as anyone else in the matter of out-of-town trading. If the shoe dealer sends away for his automobile tires, and the automobile man sends away for his furniture, and the furniture man sends away for his clothing, and so on, how can they expect to build local prosperity?

All the fine talk about civic pride that we may indulge in will never make a town, so long as the life blood of the community—the cold cash—is spent elsewhere.

A man may make boosting speeches until he is black in the face, but unless he spends his money where he makes it he is a home-town grave-digger.

Youth Wins.

PORTLAND TELEGRAM. GEORGE YOUNG, a Canadian lad of 17, has won $25,000 as a prize for swimming the Catalina channel. It is a remarkable exploit, now first accomplished by any man.

That it should be the feat of a mere boy makes it an event of first class importance in the world of sport. The untried hearts and undeveloped muscles of youth have often been able to perform marvels which demanded only brief spurts of energy, but seldom have they been able to survive the grueling test of long sustained effort.

This young Canadian has not only covered a tremendous stretch of more than twenty miles of sea, meaning a far greater swimming distance, but he has done it in the remarkable time of 15 hours, 47 minutes. He reached the shore fresh and vigorous, his body recovering from the cold in ten minutes and his heart and pulse restored to normal in five.

It would hardly be necessary to include in the dispatches the fact that this boy does not smoke or drink, that he keeps regular hours and with it all, is a mother's boy and not ashamed of it. Such deeds as this are accomplished by something more than the machinery of muscles. They demand courage, persistence, stamina, pure grit, the essentials of a character that goes deeper than the skin, or flesh or the heartbeat itself.

Swimmers are interested in the fact that this Canadian, like our Gertrude Ederle, employed the American crawl or trudgeon stroke, which with these two victories to its credit, seems to be established as the method which realizes the greatest result for the least expenditure of effort.

That is a matter of technique for experts to observe, but the general public is interested in the fact that the swim of George Young proves the excellence of his technique in living. Seventeen years of health, active, clean, ambitious boyhood lie back of George's victory. They have accumulated a working capital that will bring in dividends as surely as the $25,000 which they have won for him.

The Plague of Laws.

WILLIAM P. HELM, JR., who specializes in government statistics, in an article in the American Mercury, entitled, "The Plague of Laws," declares that the total number of laws theoretically operative in the United States, including city, county, state and national, approximates 10 million, and that the time has come for a new Justianian to junk the whole complicated mess and substitute a simple code, like that of the Roman lawgiver.

In 1925 no fewer than 13,000 new laws appeared on the statute books of the 48 states. Fifteen typical American cities added 4,833 laws in one year, and there are some 13,000 important towns and cities, and all of them are busy grinding out ordinances. State legislatures will this year grind out thousands of additional laws. Commenting on the situation, the Salem, Oregon, Capital Journal says:

"The growth of bureaucracy can be traced directly to the extension of the law, and bureaucracy grows by multiplication of laws. They supplement each other. The more laws, the more bureaucrats to enforce them. The more bureaucrats, the more laws to increase and extend their power, until we have reached the point where the whole top-heavy system is breaking down and the law becomes a joke."

It can be added that practically every new law increases taxes, and one of the best ways to stop passing laws.

Larger Public Expenditure Planned.

THE State Board of Health, composed of leading physicians will present to the incoming legislature, a big program involving expenditure of state funds under a new state-wide commission to be known as the Anti-Stream Pollution Board. All the principal rivers, including the

Dr. Frank Crane Says LOVE IS IMPORTANT.

LOVE IS IMPORTANT.

PROBABLY the most important crisis in any individual's life is when he or she falls in love. This is the most intense experience to which humanity is subject.

It has more to do with the happiness of one's life, more to do with the making or unmaking of one's character than almost anything else.

Most of us do not live in our intelligence, but we live in our emotions. We live by sentiment. And the experience of falling in love stirs the deepest emotions of the human heart.

It is doubtful whether any creative work is ever undertaken unless under the stimulus of his passion. We know that the finest in poetry, in music, and in literature owes to its inception.

It is more important for a man rightly to pick out the kind of woman whom he is to love than to make any other decision. And it is well known that love plays the most important part in every woman's life.

Love has been responsible for most human happiness and for a great part of human tragedy. There is no crisis in one's career where he needs to use more judgment and guiding intelligence than in this crisis.

Love is one of those inspirations that come from we know not where. The Buddhists think that they can remember some occurrence in a former career. Perhaps that is as good an explanation of it as any. For when love comes it carries all before it.

It is curious to reflect that this matter is in the hands of the comparative young people. In other words, the decision of a subject that is most important in life does not depend upon the old or the mature, but upon the young and impulsive.

Columbia, with their tributaries, will be classified and put under legislation to be enacted and rules and regulations to be administered by the proposed new board.

This proposal can do much good, as well as much damage to the state of Oregon. The logical place for many industries such as sawmills, paper mills, canneries, linen mills, woolen mills and most industries of importance, is along streams. As one man expressed it, "The Willamette River is nothing more than a drainage canal for the Willamette Valley."

It is right and proper to keep all possible waste and dirt out of our rivers. On the other hand, it is impossible to develop any section of the country without industries. Industries have to get rid of a large amount of waste. Some of it can be disposed of in no manner except through natural drainage into streams.

If the Anti-Stream Pollution Board will cooperate with industries to cut out useless stream pollution, it can do much good. If it adopts an antagonistic attitude in an effort to cut out all stream pollution, it can do irreparable damage to the state of Oregon and its industrial development.

New boards and commissions are always dangerous and expensive, and this new proposal is worth watching carefully. — The Manufacturer.

Cooperation Growth Significant.

THE greatest agricultural movement in the United States today is the movement directed toward cooperative effort, according to W. M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, who has an interesting and convincing article on Cooperation and the American Farm in the current issue of the National Republic.

"Agricultural cooperation is a going concern," Mr. Jardine declares. "Its progress in the last few years has been truly remarkable. In 1920, the Department of Agriculture received reports from 8,449 active cooperative organizations; in 1925, 9,966 active organizations were heard from during the year, an increase of 1,515. Reports of failures during the same period ranged from 194 in 1923, 1.9 per cent of all cooperatives reporting that year to 27, less than .3 per cent, in 1925. There are approximately 12,000 cooperative marketing associations at the present time. We do not have a record of all active organizations, nor of all that have gone out of business, but our information regarding failures since 1920 is fully as complete as that regarding active organizations. Consequently, the figures quoted give a true picture of the situation and show conclusively that cooperation is a permanent factor in American agriculture. During the same period, the cooperatives have increased greatly the volume of business which they handle. Conservative estimates, based on reports from over sixty per cent of all the associations in the United States, place the total business of cooperatives at $1,600,000,000 in 1921, and $2,500,000,000 in 1925.

"The record of cooperation since 1920 is proof that the members and officials of the associations are gaining in cooperative experience. But further than this it is a demonstration of the inherent soundness of the movement, if such a demonstration were necessary to those who have followed cooperation through the various stages of its development."

A Smile.

A Little at a Time. According to a morning paper women are now buying dresses on the instalment plan. We seem to have seen some of them wearing the first instalment.

Satisfied. Long-suffering Tailor—You recently inherited money. Why not pay me what you owe me? His Client—I wouldn't like people to think that inheriting money has changed my habits.

Take That. "Now then what should a polite little boy say to a lady who has given him a penny for carrying her parcels?" "I am too polite to say it, madam."

Just Plain. Social Worker—Do you believe in the transmigration of souls? Fisherman—Well, no, sir. I like 'em fried in the ordinary way.

Scotch. "Never borrow money from that man, he is a Shylock. In winter he takes 50 per cent, and in summer sixty."

To Make Sure. "If every young girl had a hobby at home half our saxophone players would be out of work." announced daily paper. Then I suggest that every young girl should have two hobbies at home.

Dot's Nize. "Vat yo doink, Abie?" "I'm drunk." "Vat's dat?" "Sure, I'm drunk pictures on the paper!"

That's What We Always Wondered. The teacher had been lecturing his class on the wisdom often displayed by animals and birds. He compared it with that of human beings, to his latter's disadvantage.

Having finished his discourse, he invited his pupils to ask questions bearing on the subject. One small boy held up his hand. "Well," said the teacher, "what is it you want to know?"

"I want to know, sir," was the reply, "what makes chickens know how big our egg-cups are?"

Helpin' Mother

My Mother has a funny way of gettin' boys t' work! I wouldn't jus' exac'y say That I'm a lazy shirk, But I guess most boys ain't so keen T' do a lot o' chores. Especially when things're green, We like t' be outdoors. I know my Mother shouldn't do So many things for me, Unless I try t' help her, too. I'm willin' t' but gee, Buffere I know it, she's begun T' do my job! She'll say, "I guess that I can get it done; You run on out and play!" An' that makes me feel kinda mean; An' so I dig right in An' do my work up slick an' clean. Then sometimes I begin Another job, t' let her know That she can count on me. I guess most boys are awful slow, But we don't mean t' be.
