The Dangerous Season.

PENDLETON EAST OREGONIAN. THE trading season is at hand at Salem, according to experienced newspaper correspondents covering the legislature. It is the dangerous season. Veteran lobbyists and members who have axes to grind look forward to this period of the session with great eagerness. Measures that could not get to first base, if considered only on their merits, may sometimes be jammed through when the trading season is on.

Friends of the workmen's compensation act will do well to be on guard during the remainder of the session. There is public approval of the compensation act and it is satisfactory for employers and for workers. But such things mean nothing to those who wish to slaughter the law. When the trading season is on those who rely on the merits of a proposal often find they are wasting their time. The Carlin bill to give the state board supervision over county, city and district budgets, bond issues and tax levies will not be passed if considered in the open. It is a crazy scheme and will be very harmful if passed. We had a sample of that line of action several years ago and it worked for chaos everywhere. Yet people with unrevealed motives of their own wish that bill adopted and they may be able to logroll it thru if no alarm is given.

It would be appropriate for every county government, every city, school district or port district official to take a look at the Carlin bill. It is a plan to upset local self-government and place authority over local matters in the hands of state officials who will have no chance to know what's what or why. The trading season at Salem is a dangerous time. Most of the schemes that put the legislature into disrepute are concocted during this period. During the trading season conditions are created that set the stage for direct legislation and the long ballot at election time. It is the vote buying period and vote buying is incompatible with good government.

Over 170,000 New Laws.

SENATOR BORAH says we make too many laws. This country will be "a republic in name, and a bureaucracy in fact," if we don't check the wholesale lawmaking machine. Not all the laws are made in Washington. Forty-eight Legislatures are busy.

The new laws suggested here and there number about 177,000, a fantastic figure. However, civilization itself, to say nothing of this glorious republic, is an experiment, in its infancy. Children try many things, all trying is useful. Even if they burn their fingers, that's useful. It teaches them to avoid fire.

Each law is an experiment, an effort to remedy something wrong or establish something good. Once men were hanged, by law, not by lynching, for stealing a horse. Now they steal automobiles, and hanging for horse thieves automatically disappears. Not the foolish things we plan but what we actually do counts. If one of the 170,000 new laws could discourage crime without "cruel and unusual punishment" that would be a blessing.

The Six Per Cent Limitation.

PORTLAND TELEGRAM. SHOULD the 6 per cent tax limitation of the state constitution be repealed? This is a question on which the people doubtless will again be asked to vote at the next general election, for indications are that the legislature will refer the proposal repeal to the electorate. A resolution for the purpose passed the house and another is pending in the senate. It is a question that should be given careful thought by every class of voters, especially the farmers, who particularly are supposed to be benefited by the limitation.

Are the taxpayers benefited by this constitutional provision? It is a question that needs deep study before being answered. That the six per cent limitation has led to confusion in state and municipal government is a certainty. Some claim that it has, like many reforms, brought evils from which the people have suffered. But would its repeal result in greater evil and an overwhelming deluge of taxes? That is the question.

The masses in Oregon for a dozen years have regarded the 6 per cent limitation as a gift from heaven sent in response to the prayers of an overtaxed people. They have forgotten—if they ever realized—that the idea of the limitation did not originate with the people, but with certain big interests that wanted to pay less taxes.

The 6 per cent limitation inhibits the state tax commission or any other tax levying body, such as a school board, a city council or a board of county commissioners, from levying for a greater amount in taxes in any year than the amount of the previous year plus 6 per cent. It has been presumed that the limitation applies only to the ordinary ad valorem taxes on property, but interpretations of the act differ. The attorney general has held that it applied also to an income tax, and there is a possibility that it would apply to other forms of taxation that are being considered by the legislature unless the lawmakers go through the tedious and risky process of referring them to the people. And as for referring them to the people, an attorney may be found who doubts if a popular vote legally can stave off the 6 per cent limitation unless an election is called every year. Because of this uncertainty The Telegram recently suggested that the legislature should contrive to get an interpretation of the limitation from the supreme court.

Dr. Frank Crane Says

THE TROUBLERS ARE TROUBLED

A SENTENCE worth pasting in the proverbial hat and remembering is:

The troublers are also the troubled. Those six words explain a lot in life. They help give perspective to the irritations of the day.

In the schoolroom the children hard to manage who cause most of the trouble are the ones who are troubled themselves—who are in some sort of ill health, who have poor home environment, who are unhappy.

In large families where one child occasions more worry there may be poorer health or more highly strung nerves.

Ill-health of some sort is the secret of most of the cantankerousness of childhood.

Among grown-ups the trouble makers are also the troubled. The criminal class is, almost without exception, composed of those who are physically or mentally sick.

The jealous husband or wife is a trouble maker who is troubled. He lives in constant torment himself, tortured by his doubts and suspicions.

The cruel are often those who themselves are tormented by fear.

The sarcastic, cutting tongue often indicates inward wounds that have never healed.

Dyspepsia and constipation are responsible for a large share of ill humor in the world.

The braggart is troubled with a secret fear of being inferior, the surly person hides behind the mask of his sensitive timidity, the irritable person has nerves stretched to the breaking point.

The nagging woman is usually worried, nervous, overworked. Socrates' famous sentence... The men and women who are gentle and good are also happy and the unjust and evil are miserable, derives much of its truth from the obvious fact that the happy are usually gentle and good, the miserable unjust and evil.

The joint resolution introduced by Senator Hall contains in its preamble some allegations that are at least pertinent. In effect it declares that the limitation has encouraged rather than curbed extravagance, that it has killed thrift. It avers that both the state and the municipalities each year increase taxes squarely up to the limit, and that there is no such thing in Oregon as an unexpended tax balance. It mentions that many progressive citizens hold the 6 per cent limitation responsible for the increase in taxes and "the alarming increase in bonded indebtedness of the various political units of the state of Oregon."

Perhaps Senator Hall has exaggerated conditions.

Would the Oregon taxpayers be better off if the limitation were removed, and, regardless of whether other tax laws are enacted, an equitable method of arriving at the valuations of big industrial and financial properties were adopted? Here is a good question to wrestle with. A bill to reach these properties pends at Salem. On good authority it is stated that the measure would increase the assessed valuation of Oregon property by many millions of dollars. But with the 6 per cent limitation it would not bring the new revenue that the state needs. It would only distribute the burden more equitably. With the limitation removed it would do both, and some careful observers hold that the added taxable valuation of industrial and income producing property would be so great that the state could have all the revenue it needs, with a fair tax on everybody, which, of course, would have to be a lower tax on the land owner than the present levy against his holdings.

No Laughing Matter

Lita Grey Chaplin (above) and her famous comedian husband are at marital odds. Suits and counter suits over money and the custody of their two children have taken the smile from Charlie's face. Mr. Chaplin suffered a nervous collapse while in New York.

Brooklyn: She's an angel in truth, a demon in fiction. A woman's the greatest of all contradictions. She's afraid of a cockroach, she'll scream at a mouse, but she'll tackle a husband as big as a house. She'll take him for better, she'll take him for worse, she'll split his head open and then be his nurse. And when he is well, and gets out of bed, she'll pick up a teapot and throw at his head. She's faithful, deceitful, keensighted and blind; she's crafty, she's simple, she's cruel, she's kind. She'll lift a man up, she'll cast a man down, she'll make him her clown. You fancy she'll do this, but you find she is that, for she'll play like a kitten and bite like a cat. In the morning she will, in the evening she won't, and you're always expecting she does, but she don't. —J. W. D.

Near Sighted.

She was frightfully near-sighted and couldn't recognize things more than a yard away. Her lover didn't know of it yet, and she was going to make sure he didn't find out. Before he called that evening, she placed a pin in a tree about fifty feet from a bench where she was certain they would sit.

Sure enough, they strolled for some time in the garden and then he suggested sitting on the bench.

"Oh, look at the pin in that tree over there!" she exclaimed.

"Don't be foolish! You couldn't possibly see a pin in that tree. Why, it's over fifty feet away."

"You come with me, and I'll prove there's a pin."

She grabbed him by the hand and they started for the tree.

On the way, she stumbled over a cow.

Friendly.

Patient: Say, Doc, what's this bill for? Doctor: Forty-two dollars—forty calls at two dollars a call and two dollars for medicine.

Patient: All right, Doc, here's two for the medicine. I'll pay the visits back.

Taking No Chances. "I need $20, could you loan it to me?" "Surely, what do you want it for?" "I want to buy a railroad ticket."

"I'm sorry but I left my pocket book at home."

Poor Papa.

Mamma: "Johnny, I wish you would be a good little boy."

Johnny: "I'll be good for a nickel." Mamma: "The ideal! Why can't you be like papa? Good for nothing!"

Georgie Patches It Up.

Little Georgie was invited out to dinner with his father and mother, and before starting the latter impressed upon the darling boy the necessity for his speaking in complimentary terms of the food.

After he had tasted the soup, he said to the hostess, "This is pretty good soup—what there is of it." A glare from his mother pulled him up. So he corrected himself by saying, "And there's plenty of it—such as it is."

We Must Not Falter Now

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne. America today needs men Of courage, and of vision clear To bring into our lives again The spirit of the pioneer. America needs men of might And character, to fight their way Across a wilderness of night And win for us a better day.

We need the statesmanship that dares To challenge rule and precedent! We need the leadership that shares And stimulates our discontent! For there are higher goals to gain, And there is nobler truth to learn, Before we ever can attain The great rewards that we should earn.

Contentment is a curse to men, If born of idleness or greed! America must seek again Expression through heroic deed. We must not falter on the way Our fathers trod with steadfast zeal. America needs men today To lead us toward a new ideal!
