The social gathering at the church Friday night impressed upon us the need of more social gatherings of a similar nature, especially for the boys and girls. Our children are our greatest assets and did you ever stop to think that in our particular community we provide absolutely nothing in the way of amusement for them, except the frequent dances, and some of the dances which have been given were of a questionable type? An organization of Boy Scouts, Girl Reserves or Campfire Girls would provide a good outlet for youthful energies. Hiking clubs are always popular. It might be a good plan for the sponsor of each of the boys' and girls' clubs to use his club as a nucleus of a social organization. We are provided with a superabundance of organizations here and although we have no Rotary or Kiwanis which specialize in working with and for the young people we have an I. O. O. F., a P. T. A., Rebekah, Grange, etc., any of which could well afford to sponsor social activities for the youth of the community. We are not opposed to dancing but we think there should also be other social diversions provided for youngsters.

Four Hundred Wild Horses Rounded Up in Heppner District

(East Oregonian.)

Four hundred head of wild horses were rounded up during the winter in the Heppner district, according to George Clark, forest ranger at Heppner on the Umatilla national forest. Of this number 100 were shipped to Portland where they were slaughtered and the products used for various purposes. The remaining 300 head, he said, were sold at public auction, bringing from $2 to $40 a head.

These horses were made up of strays and unbranded horses and included four unbranded stallions. The horses were ordered rounded up by the Morrow county officials and the work was done under the supervision of a man appointed deputy sheriff. Stockmen of that district aided in the work who were in sympathy with the movement to conserve the range for stock.

Horses shipped to the factory at Portland, according to the forest ranger was also a humanitarian work of no use to anyone and gathering them up in addition to conserving range was also a humanitarian work inasmuch as these horses were almost starved from running loose all winter. Records of all horses sold at the auction are being kept by the forest service so that they will not be permitted to run at large on the range during the summer. Where they are turned loose the new owners will be held responsible.

Money received for the horses above actual expense to the county was turned over to the men who did the work of rounding them up.

WILL GO TO FOSSIL. Frank Mercer and family will move to Fossil soon, where Mr. Mercer will have charge of the new Standard Oil station being opened up there. He has been with the company at Heppner for nearly three years and seemed to be a fixture here, but thinks that this is a good opportunity to step up the new station will be opened for business about the 20th of this month. Mr. Mercer is succeeded at Heppner by Leonard Schwarz, who will handle the big truck. Leonard has been working for several months in the Central Market as meat cutter.
