BOY SCOUT MEETING.

All Scouts will meet as usual in the basement of the Christian church, this Tuesday, April 5th, at 7 o'clock. This means boys of 12 years of age or over. There will be an election of officers and patrol leaders. A general reorganization will take place, and a definite program started. We mean earnest effort and real program from now on. Boys under 12—those ranging from 8 to 12 years of age, will meet this coming Tuesday, the 7th, in the Episcopal parish house, when we will organize a Boy Ranger group. The Boy Rangers are a fine organization and we want all the boys who can to join it. This group will be a stepping stone into the Boy Scout organization. We want boys who mean to work and learn something. First sixteen boys in each group who respond to this call will become members. Others will have to await further organization. REV. STANLEY MOORE.

Lower: Crowd around boys' mine as thirteen sacks of gold, valued at $13,000, were being brought out.

THE WORLD'S WISDOM. What a marvelous store of wisdom has been gathered by man. No one mind and no one library can contain it all. The sum total is incalculable. It is possible that man's wisdom and knowledge is but fragmentary. Yes, it is so incomplete that fresh knowledge is accruing at an even increasing rate. Yea, in every direction there are boundaries beyond which it seems impossible for man with all his wisdom to go. He can not go beyond them without a wisdom not his own. Yea, imperfect man with his partial knowledge must yet trust in a perfect God having all knowledge. The evening service at the Church of Christ begins at eight o'clock and the subject will be "Worldly Wisdom." The theme at the eleven o'clock service will be "The Lion's Roar." MILTON W. BOWER, Minister.

TICK FEVER.

From State Board of Health. Rocky Mountain spotted fever has existed in some portions of eastern Oregon ever since that part of the state was first settled. The disease is transmitted to man only by the wood tick, Dermacentor venustus. It is characterized by onset with chill, continued fever, severe pain in bones and muscles, headache, and an eruption that appears first on the wrists, ankles and back, finally covering the whole surface of the body. It is a dangerous disease, frequently fatal and always serious. The larvae and nymphs of the wood tick feed upon small animals such as the mountain rat, ground squirrel, woodchuck, chipmunk, etc. The adults feed upon domestic animals such as horses, cattle, sheep, and upon large wild animals such as deer, bear, coyote, and mountain goat. The virus is transmitted by both the wood tick and the rabbit tick. It is maintained by passage from stage to stage in the development of these ticks and by new lines of infection starting in previously uninfected ticks feeding on infected hosts. The wood tick is the only known agent of human infection. The rabbit tick feeds only on rabbits and game birds. Wood ticks and rabbit ticks meet in common on rabbits. Game birds by spreading rabbit ticks assist in the spread of infection. The wood tick completes its cycle in two years, feeding three times, first as larva, then as nymph, and finally as adult, feeding at each stage on a separate host. Control methods are directed against the larvae and nymphs on rodents and the adult tick on domestic animals. The methods employed consist of rodent destruction, dipping of domestic animals, hand picking, restriction of grazing, and the application of repellents. The prevention of Rocky Mountain spotted fever is directed mostly against the tick. Ticks are to be avoided in the infected region. If it is necessary to work where these ticks abound, the entire body and clothing should be examined twice a day for ticks. The ultimate control of tick fever depends on the suppression of the Dermacentor venustus and related ticks in infested areas. This, perhaps, is not so hopeless a task as it may seem at first. A parasite that feeds upon ticks was introduced into this country in 1926. It is too early to determine the success of the parasite in the United States. In France where this insect is native, ticks are practically exterminated in those places where the parasite is found. The serum of convalescent animals is protective. It has also been demonstrated to have definite protective value for man.

LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES. The next regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary will be held on Wednesday evening, April 6, at 7:30. On account of the high school operetta on Tuesday night the meeting had to be postponed. The hostesses for this meeting are May Gilliam and Clara Flory. There will be a meeting of the exclusive committee at the home of the president, Mrs. Moore, on Monday evening, April 4, at 7:30. The Easter dance which is to be given by the Auxiliary at the Elks hall, has been changed from Monday night to Saturday night, April 16. This is to be an outstanding event of the social season. Dancing will begin promptly at 9:30. This should prove to be a very lively affair, considering all the plans which are being made by the committee in charge. Tickets will be $1.00, with an additional charge of 25c for spectators.

Commissioners Bleakman and Davidson and Roadmaster McCaleb drove down to Portland on Sunday in order to be in attendance at the regular monthly meeting of the state highway commission. These officials were in hopes of being able to make some arrangements with the commission looking to the surfacing of about four miles of the Heppner-Hardman highway. This would cover that part of the road leading out from Hardman towards Heppner, that has been in a badly cut up condition during the winter, and for much of the time almost impassable. We understand the commissioners had some pictures of portions of this road, showing the tattered trucks and automobiles, as well as some stretches of the road in which the deep ruts made travel anything but a pleasure.
