As We See It.

EAST OREGONIAN.

THE Tammany forces, backing Al Smith for the presidency, may be cutting their hay too soon. There is no market this year, yet the Smith forces are out with their mowers everywhere and say the yield is wonderful. In some cases, notably Virginia, they have gotten into the wrong field if we may believe Senator Glass. However that is not the point just now.

What is the formula for president making? That is an interesting subject and opinions differ of course. There are various angles to the game but psychology is a point not to be overlooked. This is April, 1927, and the national conventions are not held until next June, 1928. If Al Smith is to occupy the front page for the next 15 months he may not hold up. People grow tired of a story after they have heard it repeated with 57 variations and they seek something new. In 1920 Wood and Lowden were the outstanding republican candidates for months in advance of the Chicago convention. At the convention they did not take well and Mr. Harding was named.

The Tammany men are supposed to be good politicians and they evidently understand Broadway politics. But presidential haymaking is a different thing. Weather conditions have much to do with prospects and it is hard to forecast the weather. Perhaps the Smith people think that if they bale their hay now and sprinkle it with alcohol it will keep well and bring a premium in 1928. That is possible, yet materials of that sort are combustible and do not make good breastworks if the enemy understands the use of matches.

No War, Thank You!

AMERICANS have high regard for the rights of other people. Therefore, America rejoices in the determination of its President that the United States shall not be dragged into a war with selfish powers to crush the nationalistic hopes of the Chinese people.

There is no denying that an effort is being made to embroil us with other nations that have selfish aspirations there. This we hope is checked for all time in President Coolidge's peremptory instructions to our military representatives in China last week.

The tearing of an American flag by a few war-crazed Chinese

Dr. Frank Crane Says

YESTERDAY'S GOOD TODAY'S EVIL.

ADVANCEMENT is not a giant stride; it is a flight of stairs. The way we make progress is not by jumps, but by steps; not by going from evil to good, but by going from evil to lesser evil.

So the evil of today may be the discarded good of yesterday. Slavery is an evil not countenanced in any civilized land today. Yet at one time it was good. It was a distinct moral advance over the old practice of murdering in cold blood all captives taken in warfare.

Prize fighting is looked upon as an evil now and almost all of the states have laws aimed to prevent it.

But a century ago prize fighting was a distinct advance over the brutality of the sports of former times. Even such a fight as one in 1825 when two men fought for 75 rounds with naked fists and the loser had to be put to bed with 50 leeches on him was a step up from the spectacles such as throwing ferocious dogs into a lions' cage and watching them tear each other to pieces which had delighted the people at a previous date.

Some of the superstitions which were connected with religion in the past are now evils and repel men of greater intelligence instead of frightening them into good conduct.

They are an evil now, but at one time for more primitive people whom they kept from doing wrong they were a good.

Duelling today is a crime. At one time it was a good because it was an advance over past customs. It gave both parties a fair chance instead of being a cowardly assassination. It substituted honor for ambush and so at the time was a step ahead.

Today we have laws against beating wives. Wife beaters are jailed and dealt with summarily. Yet a century ago in England wife beating was considered the right of a husband. A man might beat his wife within an inch of her life and go unpunished so long as she didn't die. But if she died he was treated as a murderer.

That condition of affairs is hard to understand today. But it was a distinct advance over the past when, in ancient Turkey, the husband had the power of life and death over the inmates of his harem.

It is as true that the good of today may be the evil of tomorrow as it is that the evil of today was the good of the past.

The test of the times is not whether there are evils or not, but whether those evils are less or greater than the ones in the past; whether they are a step up or down.

cannot persuade the American people that our soldiers should be sent to further the game of European capital which sees in the tremendous rising of the nationalistic spirit a grim determination of the Chinese to assert and maintain their sovereign rights. The average American of good principles is in complete sympathy with the Chinese hopes and aspirations.

Every day we read "More U. S. Marines," "More U. S. Battleships to China." All well and good, but we are confident the American people, intelligently represented by its President, will not forget that those marines and those battleships are there for one purpose only, to protect the lives of Americans—and only those Americans who follow instructions and advice of the American military authorities—sent there to protect and save their lives.

207—Count Them. UNPRECEDENTED prosperity for 207 Americans, 132 more than last year—as shown by income tax returns; citizens with an income of a million dollars or more, is the subject upon which many of the nation's fancy writers are now painting pretty pictures for all to admire.

Of course this is all the bunk. The returns by no means show that prosperity for 132—or 207—is a well distributed prosperity, and that is the thing we are all mostly interested in. It is a fact that a fraction of 1 per cent pays 95 per cent of the income tax. Also, that 82 per cent do not make enough to pay any income tax. Therefore, if only a fraction of 1 per cent makes the greater part of the profits, that obviously means that our alleged prosperity is not a well distributed or a healthy prosperity.

We don't know the names of the fortunate 207. We will hazard a guess, however, that not a few of them enjoyed the privilege of extorting gain from the consuming millions through the tariff. It is also possible, under this scheme of things, that 82 per cent "paid their tax" direct to the fortunate 207.

And as long as we are in a guessing mood, we will take one more fling. That in the list of the fortunate 207, who are now enjoying "unprecedented prosperity," you could not find one farmer or agriculturist's name.

And Wall Street wonders why agriculture did not accept the veto of the McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill with better grace.

Did you ever notice that the people who speak too lightly—sooner or later have to weigh their words?

Henry Ford sold groceries at cost in his Dearborn stores last year and made $400,000—which is funny, if you know what we mean.

GIVES LIGHT ON STAGE COACH.

Portland, Ore., April 2, 1927. Visitor Heppner Gazette Times: In checking up the file of your paper for 1926, which you have so kindly supplied to the Oregon Historical Society, a letter was found at the top of column two, page one, from E. C. Alford giving a description of a "Famous Stage Coach at DeMoss Springs," and stating that it had been the property of the DeMoss family for thirty years.

It is no doubt a very interesting historical relic, and the description given of its construction is substantially correct without a doubt; but when it comes to absolutely identifying it as being the identical "Concord Coach" in which Horace Greely rode behind "Frank Monk" early in the month of August, 1859, there might be some difficulty. Greely made the trip without doubt, because among other things he said in describing it and speaking of the driver, "had his horses seen fit to run away (as they did once run on the unhooking of a trace, but at a place where he had some room to rein them out of the road on the upper side, and thus did stop them.) I know he could not have held them, and we might have been pitched headlong down a precipice of a thousand feet where all of the concern that could have been picked up afterwards would not have been worth two bits per bushel." He speaks of the driver going ten miles an hour, and kept it up for forty miles, but does not mention his name. Even that raises a doubt.

In the matter of General Grant riding in that coach I think there is a reasonable doubt for this reason: Grant came to Oregon in the summer of 1852 as regimental quartermaster of the Fourth Infantry and was stationed at Fort Vancouver. In the summer of 1853 he was ordered to Fort Bragg on Humboldt Bay. In June or July, 1854, he resigned and went to San Francisco, and not finding employment he borrowed money from Dr. Hitchcock to take him by the way of the Isthmus of Panama to St. Louis, where he went into business for awhile, and it was 1861 before he was heard of again to any great extent.

From the fall of 1861 to 1865, he was before the public a great deal, and on to 1877, before he touched the Pacific Coast again. Therefore, as already indicated, there is a reasonable doubt about Grant having ridden in that coach, based upon the fact that Grant was never on the Pacific coast at any time while the coach was in use. If I am in error I will welcome the correction; or, in other words, I would like to be "shown."

I do not want to be understood as attempting to discourage the safe keeping of the old coach. It ought to be taken care of by all means; and it ought to be in a fire-proof building, separate from all other buildings.

The article suggests that the Oregon Historical Society might become its custodian. If agreeable to the present owners, that idea is worth considering, but it would be difficult to carry it out as there is no room here for so large an object.
