

BOUND to the NORTH by Harold MacGrath Illustrated by Henry Jay Lee

WHO'S WHO

Jeanne Beaufort, beautiful daughter of a Virginia planter, has lost her father and two brothers in the Civil War. (The year 1864.) She swears to Mrs. Wetmore, her aunt, that she will carry out the Biblical injunction for vengeance—"an eye for an eye!" While at Richmond she meets Henry Morgan, a debonair young officer, who falls in love with her. She repels his advances. She is engaged as a spy for the Confederate government and urged to use all the wiles and power of her sex to find one Parson Kennedy and bring him within the Southern lines. It is planned to have her make headquarters with a family of southern sympathizers in Washington. Jeanne learns telegraphy and other technical branches of her new calling. And elud as a boy often in the Blue of the North, she makes her way through the lines. She learns of an organization of eleven Union spies and of their meeting place in a Richmond loft. As she overhears the leader address the masked men seated about a table, Jeanne is discovered and dragged into the room. The leader unmasks and she threatens her with death, but is dissuaded from shooting her by the suggestion from one of the men that one of their number marry her. She consents and when one of the masked men volunteers to marry she refuses and claims the right to choose.

CHAPTER III

MYSTERY VISITOR.

The speaker paused and then went on solemnly: "But this I promise you, on the word of Parson Kennedy, that no man shall follow you—no man shall touch you." Parson Kennedy! The man for whom they had laid and sprung a thousand futile traps. Who had beaten them at every turn! And this formidable man was playing into her hands! "Now, then, choose," said Irony, for so the girl had mentally named her tormentor. (Would she ever be able to recognize his voice in case he did get away?) "I can certify that we are all unmarried, young and brave." She did not look toward the man who had offered to sacrifice his liberty to save her life. She looked at Irony. "I will marry you, sir," she said, "and you shall share the misery you thrust so wantonly upon me." "I see that I am hoist upon my own petard." He had the courage to laugh. And few of them realized what fine-grained courage it was. He was saving this girl's life at the expense of his future; for nothing except an inhuman jest like this would have swerved Parson Kennedy. "So be it, Miss, about to become Madame Who—I haven't even asked you to wipe the grime from your face so that I might recognize you in the future. I am satisfied." Half an hour she thought. Doubtless no stranger marriage ceremony ever took place than that which joined Jeanne Beaufort to this banterer, unknown to her either by face or name. When it was done, Parson Kennedy offered the quill to the girl. She hesitated for a moment, straining her ears. Forty minutes, forty minutes—they were on the way to her. She wrote "Mary Smith" on the hastily drawn-up certificates. Irony seized the pen from her trembling fingers and signed "John Jones." Then he stepped back—just in time.

Her hand had flown to the curtain of his mask. "Not quite," he laughed. "Mary Smith is not your real name; no more is Jones mine. But you will write your real name there when you are alone. You have told us that you believe in oaths. I'll add my real name among those who witness the transaction. Find it if you can!" John Kennedy, D.D. C-WG-L H-ED-M A-NK-S P-PA-G G-RD-A J-NK-F J-WG-A F-BNS F-WG-S W-BE-H

He folded his bare arms across his chest, and upon the left forearm she saw a bit of tattooing, a blue circle with a curious little device in the center. The glance was sufficient to print it indelibly in her mind. "Fifty minutes!" Dear God, why did they not come? "All over!" said Parson Kennedy, putting on his mask. He pulled out the drawer and tossed upon the table some stout twine. "Bind her, Benedict, and tie a handkerchief over her mouth. Then set her in my chair." Coats and hats were picked up in furious haste, papers stuffed into pockets; and then, like so many falling rockets, they leaped down the rickety stairs, close-pressed and jostling. "Curse you, you have wrecked three lives this night!" whispered a voice in Irony's ear. But as he turned, the speaker disappeared. Up in the left the girl struggled and strained futilely. Beaten, dishonored, humiliated! It was intolerable. It was all some hellish nightmare; it could not possibly be fact, reality. And yet, that dreaded man, Parson Kennedy—he had been real enough. A marriage certificate, crudely done but none the less genuine! stared at the varied scrawls. God in heaven, married! To what, to whom? She suddenly became limp, swayed, and sank face downward upon the table—where her belated troopers in buttoned coats found her.

Madam who? When Jeanne Beaufort started out on her self-imposed mission that night, she had been something of an adventurous girl! She left that loft wholly a woman—broken, bewildered and terrified, it is true, but a woman, her brain seething with unimaginable reprisals. Her troopers had come to arrest a band of conspirators; instead they looted a tigress who reviled them and taunted them for their slowness. Each and every one of those eleven men should pay; and more than his comrades, the man she had named Irony. Parson Kennedy had had the hardihood to disclose his saturnine face to her. She could watch him in Washington, move against him in direct and open warfare.

None of them would recognize her again; of this she was assured. Within three weeks' time Jeanne was able to pick up her natural role. She was always meeting Morgan, and he was always sighing for some favor, always metaphorically at her feet. One day she liked him; another she disliked him. Perhaps this was accountable to the fact that she knew there was a strong man deep down under all his foppery. "But I do not love you, and I have no intention of loving you," she protested. "Well, since you intend not to love me, I see hope. Come Jeanne Beaufort, let us understand each other."

"I understand myself perfectly," she countered. "You laugh, joke, dance, play—and all the while that brilliant mind of yours is scheming, scheming." "In mercy's name, for what?" "The Cause!" His face grew serious. So did hers. "What do you mean by that?" She felt vaguely alarmed. Did he know? "I mean that what you are, I am; that I search for Death even as you do; that hazard is breath to us both. To stab the enemy in the back, that is your work and mine. To a soldier who falls into the enemy's hands—to him the honors of war! But to you and me—short shrift, as they say. We shall be in Washington together shortly; and from time to time I shall be under your orders. Not a word's your aunt is approaching. I shall see you at the ball tonight. I expect to join my regiment tomorrow. Good day!" She felt her aunt's arm steal around her. "Your ball-dress has come. Better try it on and see if it is all right." "You will break hearts," said her aunt, reflectively. "I hope so," replied Jeanne enigmatically. She slipped off the gown. "You're a strange girl. If you weren't flesh and blood, if I didn't know you as I do, I should say you had no heart." "Sometimes I wonder. Perhaps I should have been a boy; they don't have to have hearts." "There are times, however, when I believe that you are a boy."

"That's an odd remark," Jeanne declared, turning quickly. "Auntie!" "You have made trips to Washington. Your secret is not yours I understand. But take care, I can surmise that you are playing with dangerous weapons. You'll want to be alone now; so—by—by until supper. Jeanne sat down on the bed. For a quarter of an hour she remained motionless.

So Henry Morgan was a spy and had leaved in some manner that she was one also. And the keen, logical mind of her aunt was no longer to be ignored. If they two had found out her secret, others might. Henceforth she must step with the utmost caution. She was strong only because she was unknown. Married! She laughed; it was a queer little sound. How she had poured over that document! Vainly had she striven to make sense of those broken words. She must go to the ball that night, dance, laugh and chatter. "You are as beautiful—" "Now major, if you please." "But this night is my last," Morgan declared. "You would not send me to the front unhappy?" "Where is your regiment?"

How she had poured over that document! Vainly had she striven to make sense of those broken words. She must go to the ball that night, dance, laugh and chatter. "You are as beautiful—" "Now major, if you please." "But this night is my last," Morgan declared. "You would not send me to the front unhappy?" "Where is your regiment?"

How she had poured over that document! Vainly had she striven to make sense of those broken words. She must go to the ball that night, dance, laugh and chatter. "You are as beautiful—" "Now major, if you please." "But this night is my last," Morgan declared. "You would not send me to the front unhappy?" "Where is your regiment?"

How she had poured over that document! Vainly had she striven to make sense of those broken words. She must go to the ball that night, dance, laugh and chatter. "You are as beautiful—" "Now major, if you please." "But this night is my last," Morgan declared. "You would not send me to the front unhappy?" "Where is your regiment?"

How she had poured over that document! Vainly had she striven to make sense of those broken words. She must go to the ball that night, dance, laugh and chatter. "You are as beautiful—" "Now major, if you please." "But this night is my last," Morgan declared. "You would not send me to the front unhappy?" "Where is your regiment?"

How she had poured over that document! Vainly had she striven to make sense of those broken words. She must go to the ball that night, dance, laugh and chatter. "You are as beautiful—" "Now major, if you please." "But this night is my last," Morgan declared. "You would not send me to the front unhappy?" "Where is your regiment?"

How she had poured over that document! Vainly had she striven to make sense of those broken words. She must go to the ball that night, dance, laugh and chatter. "You are as beautiful—" "Now major, if you please." "But this night is my last," Morgan declared. "You would not send me to the front unhappy?" "Where is your regiment?"

How she had poured over that document! Vainly had she striven to make sense of those broken words. She must go to the ball that night, dance, laugh and chatter. "You are as beautiful—" "Now major, if you please." "But this night is my last," Morgan declared. "You would not send me to the front unhappy?" "Where is your regiment?"

How she had poured over that document! Vainly had she striven to make sense of those broken words. She must go to the ball that night, dance, laugh and chatter. "You are as beautiful—" "Now major, if you please." "But this night is my last," Morgan declared. "You would not send me to the front unhappy?" "Where is your regiment?"

stranger stood at her side and chatted pleasantly. He was rather original; and certainly he was comely. In the middle of a sentence he bowed abruptly and walked quickly toward the door out of which Morgan at that moment vanished. Jeanne looked after the stranger less chagrined than astonished. "Well!" she murmured. "The next time I see Mr. What's-his-name I'll snub him unmercifully."

At midnight while Jeanne was at supper, a man in a half mask entered the garden of her home. He appeared to be familiar with his ground, for he went directly to the ladder hanging against the board fence, raised it to the window, climbed up and disappeared inside her bedroom. A man who had followed him pressed closely against the fence and waited.

The man in the half-mask calmly proceeded to open Jeanne's trunk. There were several suits of male attire, one in blue, one in butternut and three in non-descript. He shrugged. Next he opened the Florentine box. The thing he sought, however, he did not find. He found a blank slip of paper and drew something upon it. He tucked it into the side of the dressing-mirror, blew out his candle and stole away. The other man followed him cautiously. Suddenly the shadower ran forward on his toes. The other heard him but was not quick enough. They fought silently, but the advantage lay with the assailant. With a grip of iron he held the others arms against his back, reached over and snatched a paper from the inner pocket—nearly, as if he knew the paper would be there. Then he flung his victim roughly against the wall of the house and took to his heels. When at length he stopped, it was under a street-lamp. He straightened out the purloined sheet, read it, tore it into little pieces and dropped them into the gutter.

He looked at his watch; he had one hour. That time he must find two more and ride in on the allies. "Ah, my friend, I was right," he said to himself. "I don't know what you were doing in that house, nor whose house it is; but I had an idea that you carried the life of my comrade in your coat."

(Continued next week.)

32 NEW SUBJECTS AT U. OF O. University of Oregon, Eugene, May 5.—To meet the increasing demands caused by the constant growth of the University for a wider range of courses in the University, 32 new subjects have been approved by the board of higher curricula for the academic year 1927-28, it was announced today. Two departmental reorganizations were approved by the board, one which will affect the biology department, and the other the Portland school of social work which was put on a separate professional basis. The name of the department of botany will be changed to plant biology and that of the department of zoology to animal biology, in order to combine the two departments into one division of biology.

GORDON'S have been appointed dealer in this vicinity for the Pacific Coast's Greatest Sunday Newspaper, with a Circulation of nearly Half a Million Copies. To get this Big-Value Sunday Newspaper with its 15 Comics in Colors and other Great Features, phone Your Order Today to Gordon's, Main 1092.

Standardization in Service

THE manufacturing of equipment for the Bell System was one of the earliest, and is now among the outstanding examples of the standardization and quantity production which are distinctive characteristics of American industry.

Quantity production for the nation-wide Bell System makes it possible to put into every item of telephone equipment better material and better workmanship, at a lower cost to the telephone user, than could otherwise be done. But the dominant advantage of uniform manufacturing, under standard specifications, lies in the improvement of the service.

Every transmitter in the System is designed to work in harmony with every receiver all over the land and to co-ordinate with all the complicated equipment and lines behind. All can function at full efficiency for they are designed and manufactured for that purpose. Standardization, not only of equipment but of operating methods, is the only basis upon which it would be possible adequately to meet America's need of a nation-wide, universal telephone service.

THE PACIFIC TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY BELL SYSTEM One Policy - One System - Universal Service

Test O Ten advertisement. Includes a diagram of a person's head with 'How Smart Are You?' and 'What Is Your Average?'. Text: 'The popularity of our "Test O Ten" feature is ever-growing, and if you aren't yet playing the game you are on your way to becoming a back number. Everybody in Heppner is asking the questions which appear in every issue. Don't be the exception. Start with this test—which is a very simple one and for which your score should be 90 per cent.' Includes 10 test questions and answers.

Central Market advertisement. C. W. McNAMER, Proprietor. FRESH AND CURED MEATS, FISH AND POULTRY. Call us when you have anything in our line to sell. Phone Main 652.

Chevrolet advertisement. 'Never before - So many fine car features at such low prices!' The Most Beautiful Chevrolet embodies the largest number of fine car features ever offered in a low-priced automobile. Bodies by Fisher, for example... beaded, paneled and finished in attractive colors of genuine Duco... smartened by narrowed front pillars, upholstered in rich and durable fabrics... completely appointed—and enhanced by such marks of distinction as full-crown fenders and bullet-type headlamps. A new AC oil filter and AC air cleaner add to the performance and dependability of the Chevrolet motor. A full 17-inch steering wheel, coincidental steering and ignition lock, improved transmission, new gasoline gauge, new tire carrier—all these are now standard equipment. See these cars today. Ferguson Chevrolet Co. Heppner, Oregon. QUALITY AT LOW COST

TUM-A-LUM LUMBER CO. advertisement. 'I Saved $980.00 worth of Pigs'—$150 for lumber in my new hog-shed made this possible—said a prominent farmer of the W. Valley. 'This type of Chicken House pays for itself—more eggs—healthier chickens.'—Material costs about 75c to $1.00 per hen. New Straw-Loft Hen House. COLLECT 50% TO 100% DIVIDENDS Every Year from necessary Farm Buildings. 'Let us help you plan it—We like to help folks build.' $1.00 spent for machine shed material saves more machinery every year. Feed Silage from T-A-SILO in well built modern barns for greater profits. Haysheds costing about $3.00 per ton for building material save many times this cost in alfalfa or wheat hay every year. 'Plans and Materials for Homes and Farm Buildings.' TUM-A-LUM LUMBER CO.

S'MATTER POP BY C. M. PAYNE STUMPED AGAIN! Comic strip panels. Panel 1: POP COULD ONE BIRD HATCH OUT A OTHER BIRDS EGG? I SUPPOSE SO. I'M GLAD TO SEE YOU TAKE UP SUCH QUESTIONS. Panel 2: GO INTO THE QUESTION FARTHER AN' POP WILL ENLIGHTEN YOU. Panel 3: IF A ROBIN WOULD HATCH A OSTRICH EGG BY MISTAKE, AN THA OSTRICH WOULD COME OUTA THA SHELL AN NOT WATCH WHERE IT WUZ STEPPIN. AN STEP ON ITS MA, AN—. Panel 4: S'MATTER, POP. GOSH I NEVER GOT THAT FAR IN NATURE STUDY MYSELF! I'LL TURN YOU OVER TO THE FOOTBALL EDITOR. HE'S WELL UP ON THE SUBJECT OF ONE PARTY STEPPING ON ANOTHER. Autocaster Service