Somewhat Amusing.

TO A MAN "up a tree" it is somewhat amusing to hear the talk put up by some of the local business men regarding patronizing outside institutions. It is especially amusing to the local printer, when, on canvassing the situation, he finds that these same local business men, to a considerable degree, fall for the gab of the mail order printer and accept his representations of "saving" them money if they buy their bill heads, letter heads, envelopes, etc., from their city printing houses.

We are not raising a howl because this is hurting us to any great extent, yet, we can easily figure that it would mean many thousands of dollars in volume of business to this little print shop if we had the commercial printing that we are equipped to handle just as well as these outside fellows. But, on the other hand, why should we be always gouging the mail-order-addicted resident of the community for his failure to give his business to the local dealer, when this same local dealer deems it necessary to get the most of his goods, printing, etc., from the city merchant and printer. We spend all our money here, and it makes us feel good to get bills each month from practically every business house in the town, made out to us on stationery printed in Portland, Spokane, Emeryville or Los Angeles.

However, we are concerned about the bigger things for this community than to haggle over this printing matter; for if our people were all consistent in patronizing the local dealers, we would not miss these items to a sufficient degree that it would hurt much. From a conversation with an outside business man of experience a few days ago, we learned that in his city this condition had prevailed in years past, but thru proper organization they were now overcoming to a large extent the evils that had grown up. The local dealers were enjoying the patronage of the community and business was going along harmon-

Dr. Frank Crane Says

STUBBED TOES TEACH

ONE of the unpopular elements about being highly moral and good is that we try to make other people be good. Nobody objects to a man's being as righteous as he would like to be; they object when that man tries to make others righteous. There is one thing dearer to the human soul than doing right; it is doing as it pleases.

Regulating people and telling them not to do things may gratify our own vanity and secure immediate obedience, but it is a poor way to improve people.

If you bring up little Willie according to all the rules of child breeding, if you keep him always carefully removed from temptation and preserve him, as it were, in syrup until he is twenty-one and then turn him loose, he will probably fall before some goo-goo-eyed charmer before he has gone around the block.

The surest way to learn and to grow in this world is to make your own mistakes and suffer the penalty of them. Only when we have erred and suffered for it do we learn thoroughly not to err. If you tell people how to go straight, some spirit of independence in them will lead them to violate your instructions.

One of the things man finds out as he grows older is that the wisdom and caution for which he has paid so great a price in suffering and otherwise cannot be handed on to his son. People have to learn things for themselves in the bitter school of experience.

The trouble with correcting people is that it is liable to destroy more than it builds up. The constant habit of criticizing and fault finding is fatal to love. If, therefore, you value the affection of anyone it is always best to treat him with appreciation, not criticism.

The only sure road to righteous conduct is to grow a force within ourselves that shall make us righteous. A force superimposed upon us by someone else is only temporarily effective.

This is why democracy is better for a people than any autocracy. They stumble forward making their own mistakes. These are mistakes, perhaps, they would not have made if an autocrat ruled them, but they learn better from them than they learn from the errors committed by an autocrat.

ously with the business element standing united for the upbuilding of the home town and every institution in it. Heppner should be able to do this; merchants here should be in position to hold the trade of the community and we sincerely hope that they will perfect an organization and get behind a move that will bring this about.

Soon we will have completed highways leading out of the city to other points that will only make it easier for our people to trade elsewhere, and it is certain that this will be the case unless active steps are taken to prevent it. Let the local business men show that they have some confidence in one another and be the first to learn the lesson of "trade at home" and we believe that the practice will become contagious to the point that it may be practically unanimous. But in the meantime, do not expect the local paper to hit the other fellow too hard when he is called upon to take his dues along with the business man who feels called upon to give his printing to the houses in far away places who have no interests here, pay no taxes in Morrow county nor help to further the interests of the local community in any way.

Probably Overestimated.

DAMAGE to early fruits in orchards "east of the mountains" by reason of the recent freeze has probably been overestimated. The earliest reports of such disasters are usually exaggerated. Known loss in limited districts which were most exposed to the excessive cold was unwittingly made to apply more or less to all fruit-bearing trees. No point is gained by saying that orchards in general have not suffered, but to what extent remains to be seen.

Interested citizens who take a pessimistic view may do well to consider the favorable condition which followed the freeze. Nature has been helping to repair the damage by providing good weather. Many trees are certain to recover from the damage to blossoms unless unexpected cold temperature should come again. It is doubtful whether late fruit has been injured at all except in a very few localities.

Granted that early and tender fruits have been badly hurt, the loss will be partly compensated by sure advance in the market price. When the supply of any commodity is below the demand, the price automatically rises. Indirectly the big end of the loss falls upon the consumer, but the loss is so widely distributed that consumers are indifferent.

Then, too, nothing is known at this early date concerning the fruit crop of the country at large. It may be heavy, normal or light. If it is below normal, the price of late fruit grown in the orchards of the Pacific Northwest will probably be above normal and here would be compensation for the loss of early fruit. At least for the present no real cause exists for a pessimistic view.

The Hens Respond.

EIGHTY-FIVE cents worth of electricity, used to get the hens up early and set them to work, increased the profits from one chicken pen $9.65 in two months, according to the manager of a poultry farm in Kansas.

The experiment was made with two pens, one of which was below the other in rate of egg production. When electric lights were used, the hens in the pen that had lagged in production caught up with and passed the production of the other pen. At the end of eight weeks the lighted pen had produced 1,158 eggs as against 905 eggs laid in the pen without lights.

There was a difference of twenty-one dozen eggs in the two pens which meant a gain in revenue of $10.50 with eggs selling at fifty cents a dozen. Electrical energy consumed in lighting the pen amounted to eight and one-half kilowatt-hours which cost eighty-five cents. The difference between cost and increased income was $9.65 which represented the gain from the use of electricity.

It may be a fact that present day liquor doesn't go as far as in the old days, as claimed by bootlegger patrons. But, they should also remember this: neither does the person who drinks it.

There are over a million and a half telephones in use in the City of New York; London has a little over one-third as many.

Aimee Semple McPherson has had her hair bobbed—and like Samson—the Temple falls.

Think-tanks are like gas-tanks in one respect—they won't take you far if they are empty.

Eight cents out of every dollar collected by the telephone companies goes into the public treasuries in payment of Federal, State and local taxes.

"My wife thinks I am the only man in the world," said a well known local man last week, "whose wife is perfect."

The Good Samaritan

Oh, what a sacred sentiment Is man's humanity to man! That life is gloriously spent Whose constant thought and daily plan Are governed by a love for men— A love so generous, indeed, That happiness comes only when It serves to meet another's need.

The Good Samaritan, who tries To minister to those in pain, The name of friendship sanctifies, And he will not have lived in vain. No monument of crumbling stone Such eminence can hope to give, For in the hearts of men alone Does honor through the ages live!

1926, C. Lawrence Hawthorne
