Dr. Frank Crane Says

HOME MAKING TRULY AN ART

PROBABLY more human happiness depend upon how a home is kept than upon any other thing.

Previously our schools have devoted little time to this important subject. Pupils are taught geometry, geography and arithmetic, they are taught logic and latin and music and all sorts of plain and ornamental information, but not home-keeping.

It is necessary to elevate the business of home-making into an art, to get people enthusiastic about it and to impress upon the mind of youth its dignity and importance.

At the State Teachers' College in Pittsburg, Kansas, they have established a house for the purpose of developing right standards of courtesy, hospitality and social graces, etc., all necessary in the successful management of a home.

They have secured a house, such a one would be used by family of moderate means, and instruct pupils how to take care of it.

They have a house manager who plans menus, does market, ing presides at the table and so on. They teach the girls how to cook, prepare food and keep the kitchen in order.

A nother girl assists the cook in preparing salads, cares for the dining room and acts as waitress.

Still another is called housekeeper. She dusts and keeps the house in clean order.

A laundress tends to the house linen and stokes the furnace. The duties are rotated so that a student gets practice in every kind of home work.

They have guests and often entertain the president of the college and the faculty.

The house is managed on a budget plan and all expenditures are limited.

The records are kept in permanent form.

The house is self-supporting and the students pay for room and board.

As there is no child in the house they are going to adopt a child and study child training.

Since so much depends upon the way a home is kept this sort of training seems to be sensible.

Judge Phelps.

IT WAS not altogether on account of his excellent ability as a jurist that Gilbert W. Phelps was held in high esteem. He was remembered at Heppner as a man who took a keen interest in public affairs, and as a citizen in this community he was a kind neighbor and friend. Expressive of a feeling that is unanimous among those of our community who knew Judge Phelps from the time that he began his career here, is this estimate of him contained in a recent issue of Pendleton East Oregonian:

During his long service on the bench Judge G. W. Phelps acquired an excellent reputation as a jurist. He was a keen minded, fair minded lawyer. When he gave a decision it was rarely reversed. Prominent attorneys practicing in his court and representing litigants that won and litigants who lost usually united in saying the judge was capable and impartial.

However, through the death of Judge Phelps we have lost more than a circuit judge. He was best liked as a neighbor and citizen. He was pleasant mannered, broad minded and always tried to be helpful. He did much for the community and in many ways. When the Umatilla rapids association was formed and an outstanding man was wanted for the presidency, he responded. He was impressed with the opportunity for service and he took hold with energy and goodwill. He worked quietly but he did some real work that was not in vain. It was during his incumbency that the federal survey was secured.

As a member of the city school board and as a member of many other local organizations the judge gave similar service. His breakdown was largely due to the fact that he drew too strongly upon his stock of nervous energy. His judicial duties were heavy enough for one man, but he did not stop there. He was of an active nature and when he took hold of a subject he worked hard. Often such work involves a strain not realized by those who escape such duties. Had Judge Phelps thought more about himself and less about serving others he would be alive today.

However, we live but once and it is not what we do that counts, not length of life?

"Only Solution—More Jobs."

Oregon Voter.

MORE factories, more pay rolls, more jobs, are Oregon's needs. Cities and towns in Oregon that spend 18.19 per cent of the 1927 taxes levied in the state, also want more factories, more pay rolls, more jobs. Progressive communities realize that more income is a better solution of our tax problem. More income means more customers and more customers mean more income for those who sell services and commodities to those who have the jobs.

A state that encourages more factories, more jobs, more pay rolls, will become favorably known as a desirable location for new industries. A state that discourages new industries through infliction of taxes that competitors in other states don't bear, places not only the state as a tax-levying body at a disadvantage but also cities that are ambitious and progressive and that are not depressed by taxes so long as taxes pay for civic betterments and necessities.

North Bend recently adopted a charter amendment that relieves new industries that locate in that city of their taxes for a period of ten years. That direct inducement or bonus to pay rolls is in direct contrast to the effect of income tax. Income tax would penalize the more successful mill or factory operators by levying added tax upon the fruits of their successful efforts. North Bend encourages skilled management. It wants to benefit from the effect of more jobs, so it waives city taxes. There must be a potency in pay rolls when a city will do that.

La Grande News expresses a similar sentiment. That city needs "plain jobs for plain people" in order that the city may progress. We quote from the News editorial in full:

It costs six per cent to live in La Grande. That is the sum total of the tax bill against property in La Grande. We live well, but the expense is great. The encouraging feature of the cost problem is that there is every indication that it is going to cost more. We need so many things. The new high school for instance. We are up against a new school building now and the necessity will reach us soon. It will be but a short time before we will be compelled to replace the greater part

Time's Up!

IT IS possible the father of waters—the Mississippi—has given us a political issue for 1928. Certain it is that the nation has suffered one of its greatest calamities during the last few weeks. It must not occur again.

Whether or not the people should demand a special session of Congress to take immediate action, is a question. We are so far from such a session might run into political jockeying, maneuverings, filibuster or what not that we hesitate to advocate such session. However:

For twenty years Congress has known this condition must be faced and action taken to eliminate a flood of this kind. It was only a question of time when all head waters would be high at the same time. That condition came about this year. You see the results.

President Roosevelt's Conservation Commission engineers urged that Mississippi floods be abolished by storage reservoirs at head waters and its main tributaries. That was twenty years ago—and since then Congress has evidently had more important business than to protect the thousands in the Mississippi valley against devastation.

Whether it be special session or the regular session in December, the first thing Congress should consider and adopt is Secretary Hoover's national plan for water conservation and distribution. One project therein is designed to bar any repetition of the Mississippi disaster by building thirteen storage dams in the headwaters of the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers, incidentally developing unknown horsepower of electric energy. When these two rivers are controlled, the Mississippi will be harmless.

We were rich enough to retire one billion dollars of our national debt last year. We are talking about another three hundred million dollar tax next session of Congress. Therefore, we are too rich to keep congressmen in office who will not protect our fellow citizens and home builders, but instead, spend their time playing politics for corporate interests.

Electricity Transforms a Nation.

MANY who think of our country as a great nation industrially, think only of industries in the large cities. But the industrial output of country towns and small cities is gradually surpassing in volume the output of the ### great metropolises.

Just as country towns and smaller cities hold preponderance of newspaper circulation in the nation, so the thousands of smaller industries hold the preponderance of payroll and general production, except in a few highly specialized industries.

This remarkable rural growth has taken place largely within the last 25 years, and would have been impossible without the far-reaching benefits derived from electric lighting and power.

Large power plants and interconnected systems which deliver power at practically any point, have enabled industries to move from crowded centers to smaller towns, and even into the country.

Better living and labor conditions have resulted.

Electricity has given every hamlet light and modern entertainment, while the telephone and automobile have made neighbors out of the whole nation. Radio, the youngest child of electricity, has brought the rural districts into immediate and constant communication with the metropolitan centers.

Is it any wonder the country towns and smaller cities grow, when they have virtually all the advantages and conveniences enjoyed in the largest cities, without the disadvantages.

Electricity is the reason for our marvelous rural and smaller city transformation.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Notice is hereby given that on the first day of June, 1927, at the hour of 7:30, P. M., there will be held in the Council Chambers at Heppner, Oregon, a meeting of the HEPPNER ROTARY, at which time officers will be elected.

C. W. McNameer, President.

Rape makes good summer pasture in Oregon for sheep, hogs or other stocks, says the experiment station.

Five or six pounds of seed alone or three to five pounds of seed with the recommended seedings of clover give good pasture during the summer months.

Deep and mellow seed bed is best for potatoes. Hard and cloddy soils causes low yields, says the experiment station in Oregon. Many poor stands are caused by faulty planting which can be remedied either by getting a satisfactory machine or planting by hand when acreage is small.

NOTICE OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

Notice is hereby given that the Annual Meeting of the stockholders of Lexington Farmers' Warehouse Company will be held at the Leach Hall, Lexington, Oregon, on the first Wednesday in June, 1927, said date being the 1st day of June, 1927, at the hour of 1:30 in the afternoon. At said meeting will occur the election of directors, and such other business will be transacted as may legally come before the meeting.

GEORGE N. PECK,
Secretary-Treasurer.

-Smiles-

Gee Gosh Yes

"What is that noise?"
 "Yes, I know, but who the deuce is 'howling'?"

Place for Everything

Anxious Father—You say you want to marry my daughter? Have you a situation?
 Writer-out-of-a-job—No, but I've written a story that has plenty of good situations in it!

Bang! Bang! Bang!

Rest here the remains of poor Jimmy Black; He went to Chicago and never came back.

Shoot the Works

Mother—Did you give your penny to the Sunday school collection, Johnny?
 Johnny—No, Mother, I lost it.
 "What, lost another one?" That makes three Sundays on which you've lost your pennies."
 "Yes, Mother, but that darned kid's luck can't last forever."

These New Gowns

He (at the dance)—Mary's a girl with plenty of backbone.
 Haw—Yes, so I notice.

Slacker on the Bench

"Well," said the Judge, "are you guilty or not guilty?"
 "Your honor," replied the prisoner, "when I came here I certainly didn't think I'd be expected to do your job."

How It's Done

He—Will you marry me?
 She—No.
 And so they lived happily ever after.

A Truthful Pair

He—this ring I offer you is a symbol of the love I bear for you. It has no ending.
 She—And it is also a symbol of the love I bear for you. It has no beginning!

Helpless in the Matter

Officer—Hey, why don't you stop when I tell you to?
 Nervous Driver—I wanted to, but I don't think this car understood you.

First Find the Job

"Will Marie succeed as an actress?"
 "No, I don't think she has a show!"

Making Progress

"If you don't behave yourself, I'll refuse to marry you!"
 "Is that a promise?"

ESTRAYED—From Bowman ranch on Butter creek, black horse, age about 7, weight 1100, saddle marked, foretop, tail and mane trimmed; no marks or brands. Left pasture middle of April. Notify John Kikenny Heppner. 8-11

You're Never "Too Old"

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

You say you're "too old"? Well, forget it! You're always as young as you feel. Forget all your aches and your ailments. Don't let Old Man Lazyleg steal Your share of the fun folks are having Who keep themselves active and spry. You never can tell what you're fit for Until you are willing to try.

You're never "too old" to be happy. You're never "too old" to be gay. You're never "too old" to find flowers Of gladness to brighten life's way. You're never "too old" to go fishing— To cast all your troubles aside And join your good friends on a picnic. You're never "too old" for a ride.

You're never "too old" for whatever Your spirit is eager to do; The limit and scope of your program Are certainly governed by you. The fountain of youth is within you; And what your soul needs day by day Is less of the toxin of worry, And more of the tonic of play.
