THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Seeks Cooperation.

THROUGH its commercial club Pilot Rock is seeking cooperation with the business men of Heppner, and is planning a get-together meeting of the business representatives of the two towns.

Upon the approach of completion of the Oregon-Washington highway these two communities are being brought closer together—now within a traveling time of one hour and a half, and the time seems ripe that better social relations, as well as business connections should be established between the two towns, Heppner being the nearest neighbor to the west that Pilot Rock has, and that place expresses a desire to get better acquainted with us. On the other hand it would be the right thing for Heppner to do. Of all the neighboring communities we know less of the people of Pilot Rock than any other town in these parts. It is a community interest and it is to develop this that the Pilot Rock Commercial club is promoting the get-together meeting.

Addressing W. P. Mahoney of the First National bank with reference to this matter, Mr. C. B. Bracher, secretary of the Pilot Rock club, states:

Heppner is our nearest neighbor to the west and we would like very much to get better acquainted. I walked down the street the other day and thought I would ask all the business men when they were in Heppner last, and to my surprise these visits were very few, and some had never been there at all. I'm sure Heppner has something that no other town in the world has, just as Pilot Rock.

We should be better acquainted for more reasons than one. Of course as a commercial body we look to the commercial end. Tourists traveling the Columbia River highway would much rather come via Heppner Junction, Heppner and Pilot Rock to Pendleton if they knew what was in store for them. We can get our heads together and figure ways and means to get the most of that traffic.

Mr. Bracher also mentions other matters, but this much of his letter is given as an indication of the attitude of the Pilot Rock people. We are sure that Heppner business men are ready to come together with the Pilot Rock club, and would suggest that they take steps to bring about the meeting proposed at as early a date now as possible. A meeting at Pilot

Dr. Frank Crane Says

YOU CAN SEE IDEALS OF PEOPLE

THE other evening I ran across this human paragraph in a volume otherwise largely technical:

"A man, as he walks in the crowd, feels himself to be an ordinary individual. But in the back of his mind is a more than half-formed phantasy. I seem to be an ordinary man, but I am really a man of great importance. People take me for just one of themselves; dressed like anyone else, they don't realize what an extraordinary man they have in their midst. But let an emergency arise—a crisis, an accident to the King—I spring to the rescue and everyone exclaims, 'Who is this? A prince in-cognito! A genius in rags! At last I come into my own!'"

This is as true of human nature as scratching a mosquito bite.

Everyone has enacted such beguiling little dramas of the mind in which he plays the hero and "comes into his own."

Every crowd of people is a stage whereon meek homeward bound clerks are enacting in their minds just what they would do if a burly rowdy should insult a beautiful girl, or an insane man run amuck with a razor.

They strike the villain down, "come into their own." On all sides we catch glimpses and flashes of what people imagine "their own" to be like.

I've played golf for thirty years and have never been on my game yet, a man is quoted as saying. His idea of what "his game" was like was something superlative and unattainable. The actual game he played was merely a failure to come up to "his own."

When a woman says, "I have had dozens of photographs taken and have never had a good picture yet," it indicates that her conception of "her own" includes an idea of personal pulchritude which her features, struggle as they will, can't live up to.

It is a truism that, in this world, sooner or later we get about what we deserve. We really "come into our own."

The reason we so rarely realize that what we get is "our own" is that our conception of what it is like is based on our desires instead of our desserts.

More Cows—Why Not?

ONE industry at Heppner that is a going institution right now, and has been for the past several years, is the Morrow County Creamery. It is not a big industry, to be sure, yet the little creamery has distributed around $50,000 in cash to its patrons during the past year, and the year before it was about up to that point, and this has meant a lot to those who have been bringing their butterfat here.

We do not presume to be much of an authority on practical farming; in fact it would be just a little unbecoming of the editor of this paper to do much preaching to the farming community in regard to how they should conduct their business, for we have had some pretty hot arguments with those who claim to know a lot more than we do, just over this point. Yet we maintain that there is room on nearly every wheat farm in Morrow county for a few head of good milk cows; they can be kept at no particular expense, and the butterfat produced will be the means of keeping up the store bills and save the expense of borrowing money to run on. Then, when the crop is harvested and turned into cash the revenue therefrom does not all go to the paying of store bills and notes at the bank.

We have been observing this method a lot and have made note of its working. We do not advocate what is known as diversified farming for this county, for it is well established that wheat is the best crop for the most of the land; it is giving the best return to the acre, no doubt, but the addition of milk stock as an adjunct is also a good thing. The milk cow has pulled out many a farmer in this county as well as in other sections similarly situated, and we wonder why there are not more who are keeping a few head of cows to supply them with the ready cash that they can get by delivering their butterfat at the local creamery.

He says that to classify some states as wet or dry is difficult, but that 39 are admittedly dry. He isn't sure how the others should be classified. The wettest are supposed to be New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Maryland. He points out that where great cities are, the wet vote is heaviest, and in Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts and Maryland the cities form the bulk of the population. While Chicago went wet this spring in the election of a mayor, nevertheless last fall when the state had a chance to elect two Congressmen-at-large and a Senator, the voters chose three dries.

In summing up Mr. DuPuy classifies the states as 39 dry, 7 wet and two doubtful. The seven conceded to the wets are: Wisconsin, Missouri, Louisiana, New York, Maryland, Rhode Island and Connecticut. According to his scrutiny the two doubtful states are New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The total electoral vote of all these states is 158, but there are 531 votes in the electoral college, and the discrepancy between this total and the 158 recognized as wet, measures the obstacles to be overcome by the wet who wishes to be president of the United States.

Punishment; Not Death.
HENRY FORD, in an interview with Norman Basely in the current issue of Collier's Weekly, declares he is unalterably opposed to capital punishment for convicted murderers.

"I believe in punishment—a whipping if necessary," he says, "but I do not believe in executing anyone. Capital punishment isn't the solution for murder. If we must have a hangman, we cannot say that 'our state killed a man.' We must say, 'You and I killed him.'"

"Everyone shares the moral responsibility for every condition to which he consents. Also, that which the state considers proper to do every citizen of that state should stand willing to do. We cannot rid ourselves of the responsibility of killing a man by merely passing the job into the hands of a paid executioner.

"The Mosaic law of 'a life for a life' is an excellent rule, but it does not mean a death for a death. If a man murders and he is executed, we have a situation by which everyone loses. The murderer should be made to pay back his debt to his victim's family through supporting that family, to pay back his debt to society, to pay back his debt to himself through work."

Mr. Ford goes on to say that there is no crime problem in the United States. "Poverty, disease, unemployment—these are the real problems. Give people work to do and crime will disappear. Alongside every college there should be a factory. There should be an industry near every school so that the student will be able to learn through the hand and arm as well as the eyes and ears."

"I have many ex-convicts working for me, but they are not criminals. Idleness and booze got them into trouble. Steady work, regular living, and economic opportunity straightened them up."

No Wet Can be President.

A PAMPHLET entitled, "Why a Wet Will Never be President," has been compiled by Atherton DuPuy, a Washington writer, who calls attention to the following facts:

The Eighteenth Amendment was ratified by 46 out of the 48 states. Wets say this came about by reason of the fact that a couple of million young Americans were abroad on war service. DuPuy says this amendment was ratified by legislatures and not by popular vote.

In answer to the claim of the wets that political sentiment has changed since 1919, DuPuy points to the results of general elections held since that time.

Last year wets claimed they would gain 200 votes in Congress, but they didn't gain any. Of 35 Senators elected they won only six. Even Wadsworth of New York was defeated.

Last fall 35 governors were elected, of whom 30 were dry, and only two out and out wets. These two are Smith of New York and Ritchie of Maryland.

Last year 35 legislatures were elected. Mr. DuPuy says after investigation that 30 are dry in both houses and only one wet in both houses.

He says that to classify some states as wet or dry is difficult, but that 39 are admittedly dry. He isn't sure how the others should be classified. The wettest are supposed to be New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Maryland. He points out that where great cities are, the wet vote is heaviest, and in Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts and Maryland the cities form the bulk of the population. While Chicago went wet this spring in the election of a mayor, nevertheless last fall when the state had a chance to elect two Congressmen-at-large and a Senator, the voters chose three dries.

In summing up Mr. DuPuy classifies the states as 39 dry, 7 wet and two doubtful. The seven conceded to the wets are: Wisconsin, Missouri, Louisiana, New York, Maryland, Rhode Island and Connecticut. According to his scrutiny the two doubtful states are New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The total electoral vote of all these states is 158, but there are 531 votes in the electoral college, and the discrepancy between this total and the 158 recognized as wet, measures the obstacles to be overcome by the wet who wishes to be president of the United States.

breakdown and the doctor has to take him in hand again."

A Foot-Note
Awkward Dancer—The Charleston becomes rather monotonous, don't you think?
Unlucky Girl—Well, try jumping on my foot.

Adam and Eve
There was a young man named Rilde,
Who, strange as it seems, was milde,
'Till he met a gay blonde
Who drank "Bottled in bond"
And made the poor chile very wilde.

No Bargain
First Boss—That new clerk of yours seems a pretty steady fellow.
Second Ditto—Yes, and if he were any steadier, he'd be motionless.

He's Like That
Cholly—Are you sure that Jack loves you; and you alone?
Molly—Oh, yes; more than that at any other time.

Stew Bad, Stew Bad
"They say this man who is singing now had a narrow escape from death yesterday."
"What a pity!"

We've Seen 'Em
He sat at the lunch counter in a cafeteria. He glanced at his watch. Only ten minutes to make that class. He'd have to hurry. He gulped down a sandwich and glass of milk, and then pointing to a pie at the back of the counter, said:
"I'll have a piece of that black-berry pie."

"That ain't blackberry," said the waitress, as she drove off the flies, "it's custard."

"Good Lord, Diana, what brings you to this terrible dive?"
"Why, Percival, the trolley, of course."
