DEATH OF OREGON MAN BIG LOSS University of Oregon, June 8.—Earl Kilpatrick, chief of rehabilitation of the American Red Cross work in Louisiana and formerly director of the University of Oregon extension division, was one of the most brilliant and promising men ever graduated from the University, President Arnold Bennett Hall said recently.

"As a pioneer director of the extension division and in other capacities he rendered conspicuous occupational service to Oregon," the president said. "His leaving the state for Red Cross service, a field in which he had demonstrated outstanding ability, was a distinct loss to the educational life of Oregon."

The University was at the time of his death attempting to find a way to bring him back to the institution in a field where his appreciation of educational problems and his genius for organization would have brought further distinction to himself and invaluable service to educational work in the state."
