

Local Happenings

District Attorney Notson was complimented with a box of very fine tokay grapes this week, received thru the mails from Mr. and Mrs. Jim Carter of Grants Pass. Mr. and Mrs. Carter have purchased a small tract near that city which is set to fruits of various kinds and their grapes are exceptionally fine. The place is also right in the belt where some excitement has been caused recently over the discovery of a metal that resembles tin, but as yet has not been catalogued by the metallurgists, so Jim does not know whether it is tin or something else that may prove to be just as valuable. They think the situation at Grants Pass is quite ideal from every standpoint, and decided to locate there after having run about for some time.

Chas. Lafferty was taken before Judge Robinson at Ione on Monday charged with assault and robbery, the complainant being Bill Winbery of that place. The justice thought the evidence produced was sufficient to hold Lafferty to the grand jury, and he placed his bond at $500, in default of which he is now being held in the county jail.

M. R. Munkers was in the city on Monday from his home at Lexington. He has just returned from an extended trip in the Willamette valley, having attended the state fair at Salem, visited relatives at Portland and elsewhere. Mr. Munkers contemplates returning to Portland where he and Mrs. Munkers will reside during the winter.

Oscar Peterson, wheatraiser of the lone country, was doing business in this city on Tuesday. He states that work of seeding in his locality is proceeding nicely, though getting rid of the excessive growth of weeds has been a matter that required lots of work. Weather conditions and moisture could not be better.

The Human Infection Carrier.

From State Board of Health.

A "carrier" is an individual who, while not suffering from a communicable disease, nevertheless harbors the germ of infection in his body through the elimination of which he is capable, either directly or indirectly, of infecting others. The discovery that contagious diseases may be disseminated in this manner is of comparatively recent date. It was known, of course, that certain diseases followed routes of human travel and that human beings were in some manner concerned in the transmission of disease. It was assumed that the infection was carried in the individual's belongings, such as clothing, or possibly in the exterior of his person, as hair, beard or fingers. An investigation revealed that some of these individuals had suffered from the disease in question but were now perfectly well. In other instances the individual had lived in houses where such illness existed. Still others gave history of a preceding illness or contact with persons who themselves had been exposed. The discovery of the existence of carriers has greatly extended the activities in the control of communicable diseases.

The virus of infantile paralysis may persist in the nasal secretions of persons who have long recovered from this disease. Even the abortive convalescent may also harbor the virus. In addition to convalescent carriers, healthy carriers of the infantile paralysis virus have also been demonstrated. Unfortunately the only method which is thus far available to demonstrate whether an individual is or is not a carrier of infantile paralysis virus is by animal experimentation. The inoculation of monkeys is expensive and cumbersome and cannot be used practically for the control of outbreaks of infantile paralysis.

As the patient himself is the primary focus of dissemination, hospitalization should be enforced whenever home conditions are such as to render complete isolation impossible. In this manner the number of healthy carriers, whom we must regard after all as the greater menace, will of necessity be diminished. Rigid quarantine of the entire household should be insisted upon if isolation of patient is not possible. Prevent the production of carriers by reducing the number of persons who come in contact with the disease. It has been definitely demonstrated that individuals who show no manifestations of having the disease themselves may carry the virus in their upper air passages. The control of carriers constitutes the greatest problem in disease prevention. If man is the sole distributor of the virus of infantile paralysis, there is no reason for believing or assuming that the child is more likely to carry the virus than is the adult.

Concurrent disinfection is necessary. It should not be forgotten that articles soiled by excretions and then handled by the sick may bear the infection, and all these should be burned or disinfected. The clothing worn by those who come in contact with active carriers should be thoroughly sterilized. Hospitalization when promptly applied to all known cases of infantile paralysis undoubtedly lessens the prevalence of the disease.

For Year Round Cash Returns

THAT dairying is the quick, consistent, cash-producing department in farming is proved by the unbiased authentic records of progressive Cow Improvement Associations.

For instance the 190 cows of one Association averaged $111.69 profit per annum. An interesting feature of this record is that the average for the whole state is only about half that of the Association average. To the fact that a pure bred sire headed each Association herd is attributed the enviable results obtained.

The 17th Annual Pacific International Livestock Exposition, to be held in Portland, October 29 to November 5, provides a splendid opportunity of learning how other farmers are securing increasingly greater and quicker returns from dairying.

The First National Bank urges every farmer in this section to attend this year's Pacific International. The time will be well spent.

Camel

The cigarette that earned first place by its goodness

The greatest endorsement ever given to a cigarette is revealed by the fact that Government figures show that more Camels are being smoked today than ever before. An endorsement by the many—not the few.

If all cigarettes were as good as Camel you wouldn't hear anything about special treatments to make cigarettes good for the throat. Nothing takes the place of choice tobaccos.
