(Received too late for last week.)
The cast has been chosen for the three-act play, "Tea Toper Tavern," which is to be given December 16th. It is as follows:
Marion Day, a canny chaperon, Eula McMillan; Rosamund Reid, her niece, just out of college, Gwendolyn Evans; Sally Lee Dixon, Dixie from the sunny South, Neva Warner; Ann Annesley, a social fiend, Ruth Dinges; Barry Reid, Rosamund's freshman brother, Thomas Healey; Harriet Annesley, Ann's younger sister, Mae Gentry; Tess, Ann's protegee from the village, Ruby Padberg; Mike Ryan, a susceptible policeman, Emmett Kuns; Brian Pierpont, a brilliant young lawyer, Maurice Reaney; Rev. Archibald Perry, owner of the village flock, Edward Burchell; Dallas Thorne, owner of the "tavern," Freeman Hill; John Sedgwick, an old flame of Miss Day, James Leach; Gloria Sherwood Jerome, a fascinating widow, Erna Duvall; Celeste, Gloria's maid, Vura Breashears.
Sam McMillan of the seventh grade was absent from school with a cold and sore throat last week. Dale Lane of the same grade is out for the same reason this week.
A short program to prepare for the Thanksgiving vacation was put on at one o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the school auditorium. It was given principally by the first and second, and seventh and eighth grade rooms. Elmer Tyler, a new student from Arlington, enrolled in the sophomore class Tuesday.
Edward Burchell, while playing basketball Tuesday noon, fell and threw his elbow out of joint. His father took him to Heppner for medical treatment. It was found his arm was broken.
The Passion Play, "The Life of Christ," was given in the high school auditorium Monday night. About $15 was made for the high school.
Tuesday morning Mr. Wynd displayed his skill in photography by taking pictures of the high school. Not only the student body as a whole was "shot," but also the individual classes and officers.
Mary Slocum and Paul Miller went to The Dalles over the week-end.

FARM POINTERS.

(From Oregon Agricultural College.)
One of the most important factors in obtaining satisfactory yields of potatoes in Oregon is good seed. Each year the state college inspects many fields and bins of potatoes for certification. Sources of certified seed may be obtained on application to the college.
Vetch is best fall sown in Oregon, but growers who were unable to get in their crop this fall may sow common vetch not later than February and get a fair yield of hay. The Oregon experiment station recommends early planting of common vetch for hay, at the rate of about 80 pounds to the acre.
Fattening lambs and wethers on rape pasture is found by the Oregon experiment station to be quite an important industry in the Willamette valley. Rape is sown early in the spring and is usually ready for pasture in August and September or even earlier. The crop is an excellent fattening feed for sheep and under most conditions the operators are making a very satisfactory profit.
In storing auto truck for the winter many farmers jack it off the floor to take the weight off the tires and to get the tires off the oily floor. The storage battery is left fully charged as it is less likely to freeze in this condition. If the truck is to be overhauled, kerosene can be squirted on the nuts, suggests the department of agricultural engineering.

Fall seeding of alfalfa is not recommended by the Oregon experiment station. There is too much danger of winter killing of the small plants and in addition weeds seem to crowd out fall seeded alfalfa. Late spring plantings have always given the best results because there is more time to get the seed bed free of weeds and well settled.
