The Act Justified.

FIVE freeholders attended the city budget meeting Monday and voted an increase of $4000 in the street improvement fund for 1928. One acted as chairman of the meeting and the remaining four transacted the business. These men are to be commended for their action.

This fall the city fathers had an opportunity to make a good buy on gravel. They contracted for a large amount and proceeded to improve streets at a cost of $4000, borrowing this sum from the water fund, to be paid back out of the amount provided in next year's budget. The budget committee which met three weeks ago set this amount at $5000.

After spreading the gravel already contracted for, which was insufficient to really complete the portion of streets on which it was placed, the city faced the situation of having its street improvement fund practically depleted before the year has commenced, with nothing provided for binding much of the gravel and very little for maintenance.

Every whit in agreement with the city's street improvement policy, but believing a large part of the benefit from the investment already made would be lost if more money were not provided, the gentlemen who attended the budget meeting considered it only good business to provide an adequate additional sum to more fully complete the work and take care of the investment already made. Hence they voted the increase.

The budget committee had made cuts elsewhere in the budget amounting to $3200, so that the $4000 addition did not increase the total to exceed 6 percent of the total for 1927.

It is only lamentable that a more general interest does not exist in city governmental affairs. To our certain knowledge the matter was discussed quite freely and declarations were many times heard that the amount for street improvement should have been more. It remained for the five, however, to show the courage of their convictions. Whether they be right or wrong, they are to be commended for their action.

This paper has many times pleaded for civic improvements of various kinds, believing well planned reasonable expenditure, for the purpose to be a wise investment. The people who live, work and play in our city are entitled to good living conditions—

Dr. Frank Crane Says

THE RIGHT KIND OF PATRIOTISM.

A patriotic deed is one which reflects honor and glory upon one's country.

We recognize General Grant, the Duke of Wellington and Napoleon as patriots because they led armed forces of their respective countries.

The exploits of Colonel Lindbergh, together with that of Chamberlin and Levine, have glorified the United States. But this glory was not offset by any rancor incurred by other countries. France and Germany were just as enthusiastic in acclaiming the exploits of our fliers as we were. This is the right kind of patriotism and patriotic action, for it is one which exalts one's native country and at the same time does not awaken animosity in other peoples.

Undoubtedly Thomas Edison has glorified his own country quite as much as General Grant. On a vote taken in France recently the most popular Frenchman was found to be not Napoleon, but Louis Pasteur.

So Darwin and Jenner have done more to exalt the prestige of England than Drake and Wellington.

Koch and Goethe have spread the fame of Germany far more than Von Moltke and Ludenburgh, and Marconi and Bel-lanca have made Italy famous and are entitled to the gratitude of their country quite as much as Garibaldi.

Tolstoy has done more to spread the renown of Russia than all her warriors.

This throws a welcome light upon true patriotism which is found in that harmless rivalry of achievement by the members of the various national groups.

There is no bad blood in this competition. There is nothing gained for one country which is not equally valuable for the whole world.

We are learning that to be a good national is to be a good world citizen, and the applause of mankind is quite as valuable as the applause of one's fellow citizens.

In order to elevate our country and to magnify it, it is no longer necessary to go out and kill somebody to annex some other territory; it is better to do something that shall excite both the emulation and the applause of the whole world.

True patriotism consists in making our country stronger and better and not necessarily belittling another country.

the best living conditions possible for their money. If these conditions can be made satisfactory, our people will continue to live, work and play here, assuring that the business and social life of the community will keep up at least to where it has been in the past. And, again, the more attractive our little city can be made, the larger the bid it may make for new citizens and new life. Farmers who retire from the farm and who have their friends here may be content to reside at Heppner instead of going to Walla Walla, Portland, or elsewhere; their money may be kept invested here, and thus the town may be enabled to progress. Every large city grew from a small beginning. And though Heppner may never be a metropolis, may it some day be said to be the best little city anywhere. It can be done, and it's on the way.

Wanted—A Leader.

WITH a presidential year in the offing and the Seventieth Congress facing a staggering amount of work, the country needs more than ever real leadership. Mere politicians need not apply, for politicians' feet won't fit statesmen's shoes.

Lack of leadership has been one of the chief reasons for the decline in interest in matters political on the part of an alarmingly large percentage of voters.

There are issues in plenty—but an issue that is straddled will not bring the voters to the polls. Here is a chance for real leaders, strong men who won't straddle because they don't know how, to add to their following.

The tendency in Congress probably will be to dodge important votes as much as possible, but there are some matters facing Congress that can hardly be sidestepped. Aid for the farmers, reduction of taxes, Mississippi flood relief, Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam are among them. Leaders are needed to force the issue.

The stage is set, and the curtain has gone up. The country waits for the leaders to make their bows. It's an excellent chance for somebody.

Who will it be?

Agriculture.

AGRICULTURE has made substantial gains during the year, says Secretary of Agriculture William M. Jardine in his annual report. The farmers' millenium, however, is not yet here.

In many parts of the country one-third of the farmers' net income goes for taxes on farm land, Secretary Jardine says department figures show. Yet the farmers' tax problems are chiefly state and local, only a small part being paid to the central Government. Hence the farmers' tax problems must be worked out on a state and local basis.

Here is a sentence from his report that will bear study: "While farmers themselves are reducing their costs of production through increased efficiency, public agencies should co-operate with them in effecting a better adjustment of production to demand, also efforts should be made to diminish waste, to lessen margins between producers and consumers' prices, to reduce transportation and distribution costs, and to lessen the farmers' overhead charges by lowering or redistributing tax burdens and by improving agricultural credit facilities."

Santa Claus.

WHO says there isn't any Santa Claus? If any such there be, let him read this:

Saint Nicholas was an actual person. He was bishop of Myria, in Lycia, Asia Minor, in the first part of the fourth century of the Christian era. His father was a wealthy merchant, and Nicholas was known as a dispenser of the good things of life. Thus he came into universal popularity as the generous giver.

The American term, Santa Claus, probably originated, says one authority, through the slurring of the generous fellow's earlier name, Saint Nicholas. This authority thinks American children are probably the only ones in the world who call him Santa Claus.

FEEDER LAMBS SHIPPED.

Ten cars of feeder lambs were shipped from the local yards on Saturday, their destination being Omaha, where they will be held and fed for a few weeks and taken to the Chicago market. The lambs were sold to Messrs. Mackey & Clark of Billings, Montana by R. A. Thompson and C. W. McNamer, who purchased them a few months ago and have had them on good grass during the fall. They were all wether lamb sand averaged in weight around 75 pounds. Messrs. Thompson and McNamer are well satisfied with the results of the transaction.

-Smiles-

Fortune-Teller: "Beware of a handsome, tall blonde."
Weary Willie (sadly): "Too late. I've married her."

P: "Biffer has worked himself up, hasn't he?"
S: "How do you mean?"
"He used to be a chiropodist, now he's a dentist."

Bella: "I wonder how the expression 'an arm of the sea' originated?"
Don (with a tender look): "Perhaps somebody noticed that it hugged the shore."

Buyer: "Does this flannel shrink?"
Clerk: "Not so much as I would from telling you it didn't, if it did."

Mrs. Youngbride: "I don't want to have any trouble with you, Bridget."
Cook: "Then, be careful, ma'am, let me hear no complaints."

Doctor: "You had better be X-rayed."
Patient: "There's no need. Get my wife; she's always been able to see through me."

This is a story of the Wild and Woolly West. It concerns the sheriff of Tin Spout, who dispersed an angry mob with a few well-chosen words.

"Yes," said the sheriff, relating the story, "I managed to quieten 'em down all right. When the boys swarmed round the gaol I stepped out with a couple of guns in my hands and spoke sorter soothing to 'em."

"What did you say?"
"I just reminded 'em that my brother was runnin' the only undertaker's in the town, and everybody that knowed me knowed I was a strong family man who'd do anything in reason to boost the business of a relative."

The Bore: "I feel thoroughly wound up tonight."
Hostess: "How strange! And yet you don't seem to go."

"Oh, yes," she said, "we can trace our ancestors back to—well, I don't know exactly who, but we've been descending for centuries."

Hotel Manager: "You must please go in advance, sir. Your luggage is too emotional."
Guest: "Emotional?"
"Yes—easily moved."

Songs of Plain Folks

By James Lewis Hays

Hired Man

Hired man, bright faced, harnessing at dawn,
What'll you see and do ere the day is gone?
I'll see dew sparkle, see it dry away,
I'll see buds open on the wild pink rose,
I'll plow fresh furrows and mow fresh hay
Where gray mice scamper and the soil scent blows.

Hired man, dream eyed, resting after noon,
Do you dream, as you seem, of a fortune soon?
No, I think over what to do, that's all,
To make loads lighter for my young black team.
I'll scrape Ned's collar so that it won't gall,
I'll set Nig's traces—there is no time to dream.

Hired man, tired man, at the end of day,
Tell me true, when you're through, does the labor pay?
Well, it pays hunger and good appetite,
It pays real peace when the white stars shine.
The crickets' sawing and the moon's soft light
And the elm leaves' rustling in the dark are mine!
