BILKED WITH ABORTION CURE. The old stunt of "farming the farmer" by means of a fake contagious abortion remedy has again appeared in Oregon, warns P. M. Brandt, chief in dairying, and Dr. T. B. Sims, head veterinarian here. This time the old "Bowman's Abortion Remedy," suppressed by the government, seems to be revived in unlabeled packages shipped from the "Bowman Labora-tory and Milling company." As it is being sold through the mail by means of allegedly untruthful circulars, the government is trying to obtain a denial of mail permit from the postoffice department, local of-ficials are informed.

Leading scientists of the world are seeking a real remedy, which, if it is ever found, will be quickly given to the public. About 18 manufac-turers of so-called cures have been forced to discontinue sales or revise their labels. Effective methods of control, but not of cure, have been developed by this and other experiment stations.

It is extremely important that all alfalfa and red clover seed be tested for purity. Many samples of legumes seed carry dodder. Last spring 22 per cent of the alfalfa seed samples tested at the Oregon Experiment sta tion laboratory contained dodder, parasitic plant which practically ruins the yield of either alfalfa or red clover.

Cutting down the amount of hay and giving a succulent feed to sheep in districts where large bands are fed, is very desirable, finds the experiment station. Succulent feeds have a mild laxative effect which is beneficial to the breeding ewe. Allowing the sheep out to graze when possible is another point in manage ment which from now on may save considerable loss at lambing time.

WEEVILS IN RUGS.

At this time of year, housewives usually become alarmed because they find numerous small gray weevils in their pantry or in other parts the house, says the entomology department of the Oregon experiment station. These pests resemble the Buffalo Carpet beetles which are very destructive to rugs, upholstering or other fabrics. Before becoming unduly alarmed, an experiment should be made of the pantry supply of peas and beans as the pest is more likely to be the bean or pea weevil than any other pest.

Now is a good time to clean seed for spring planting. All dirt, chaff and weed seeds are best removed from f grain. The ordinary fanning which is found on most farms will clean grain satisfactorily for seed purposes. It pays big to sow clean seed.

SMALLPOX AGAIN.

(From State Board of Health) An outbreak of smallpox in a boarding school in this state makes it necessary for us to call attention to the danger of allowing children to attend school without vaccination. For the past twenty-five or thirty years, smallpox has been, comparatively, of a very mild type all over the United States. As a result people have lost the wholesome respect which former prevailed for this disease. Thi led to a laxness in vaccination and as a result several epidemics of old time severity have appeared in mong those who had never bee vaccinated. No further argument should be necessary to establish the perfect protection which is secured gainst smallpox when vaccination and revaccination are universally followed. Without vaccination no means of control has any appreciable effect on this disease.

Oregon is not so completely isolat-ed from the remainder of the world that each man, woman or child should not be revaccinated against smallpos about every seventh year.

The best and only effective way o preventing and controlling smallpox is vaccination. People who neglect to be vaccinated are dangerous citizens. Their presence in a commun-ity in any number may cause a severe outbreak of this dreaded dis-ease at any time. Smallpox would be eradicated from Oregon if every-one understood the importance of vaccination.

The New England and Atlantic states have laws which require vaccination of all school children. In localities where this law is enforced of such a community are compara-tively safe, but this does not pre-clude the unvaccins'ed element hav-ing the disease. In 1924, virulent amallpox appeared in one of the large mid-western citles and it was significant to note that the disease did not occur among those who had been successfully vaccinated within seven Ten percent of the cases were years. among those whose vaccinations were very old, which proves that vaccina-tion once in a lifetime, to those ex-
