Which Candidate Does Far West Prefer?

N^{OW} that the pre-convention campaigns are getting hot, let's overcome our distaste for the discussion of politics and see which national figures stand out least hazily in the mind of the average Westerner. On the Republican side it is not Lowden. Of him the average voter west of the Rockies knows only that he once was governor of a Middle Western State beginning with an I, that he is in some way connected with the Pullman or Harvester millions and didn't get the nomination in 1920.

Borah the West knows, likes and admires-where he is, but not in the White House. The rest of them have made less impression in the Far West than the newest movie or football star, except Hoover. Despite the quiet manner in which he has sawed wood in the Department of Commerce, the West distinctly remembers him as a world figure during and after the Great War, as an organizer of remarkable ability and great constructive gifts, but not so good as an orator or a politician. And these last two points are distinctly in his favor.

Among the Democrats Al Smith is the one figure that stands out so far as the West is concerned. As a personality Al Smith has made a favorable impression on most newspaper and magazine readers irrespective of party affiliations, but his Tammany and wet connections and his religion, sad to relate, will prevent him from getting the electoral vote of a single Far Western State.

Isn't that about right, fellow voters of the wide open spaces? -February Sunset.

I suppose I had the best mother in the world. She is entitled to all my respect and esteem because she patiently put up with me all through my childhood and cared for me until the day of her death. I can remember, however, that when I went away from home in my younger days she was always solicitous that I should wear clean underwear and stockings because she said that if there was to be a train wreck and my body was found, what would people think if they found out I had on dirty underwear, as though I should care about the state of my underwear when I was a corpse.

Much of the care and trouble that mothers take is of the Martha kind, for Martha was "careful and troubled about many things.

Suppose the children do litter up the floor and pick the flowers in the garden and tramp into the house with muddy feet. Anybody who knows children expects that and if they don't know children they are out of luck.

It might be all right to see that your boys are washed behind the ears and that their finger nails are clean, but you should remember that while these things should not be left undone there are some more important things. It is important, for instance, that your children should always think of you pleasantly and gratefully. Your affection for your son counts more with him than your solicitude for his appearance.

It is well that dandruff is brushed off your husband's coat collar and that his tie is right and his boots are polished, but if you do nothing else for him but call attention to these peccadillos by and by the idea will seep into his head that you are nagging. What he wants most of all is to keep his love and esteem for you and you ought to work at making yourself worthy of that much more than to worry at how he will look to other people.

I do not mean to underrate the little attentions that should be bestowed upon those we love, but I emphasize the fact that these little things are of small importance compared with the greater matters of life.

On one occasion it was said by a wise man that the Pharisees paid tithes of mint, anise and cumin, but neglected the greater matters of the law. So we sometimes make the mistake of looking for flecks of dust when we should be admiring the landscape.

It is all a matter of proportion. The principal thing to learn in living is how to value things, how to be particular about the essentials and give small heed to the non-essentials,

CENATOR MCNARY'S bill, S. 1180, is to disburse 50 per cent instead of 25 per cent of National Forest receipts to the countics for road and school purposes. Its enactment would mean approximately $200,000 additional annual revenue to the counties of Oregon having forest reserves within their boundaries. To some extent this legislation would help make up the tax deficiency to Oregon as occasioned by withholding valuable lands from state and local taxation. The federal government holds these lands as proprietor or trustee, but the state may not tax them. About one-fourth of the area of the state is in national forests and untaxed for local and state purposes. This onefourth of area probably does not contain more than 7 per cent or 8 per cent of the total value of property within the state, but the fact that it cannot be taxed for state or local purposes places Oregon at a disadvantage with states which are permitted to tax their entire areas except the small plots occupied by the federal government for purely governmental purposes as distinct from the purposes of a proprietor or trustee. Oregon obtains considerable ben-
